Temporary Patch For Jonquiere

The Esquimalt-based ocean escort HMCS Jonquiere is undergoing temporary repairs to her bow in San Francisco.

The Jonquiere plowed into Pier 1 at the Ferry Building as she was docking Friday for a weekend visit.

None of the 140 officers and men aboard was injured in the crash, which tore a hole in the ship's bow.

Early reports said damage to ship and wharf pilings totalled $25,000.

Naval spokesmen at Esquimalt said Saturday the matter was still under investigation, and no damage estimates would be released until Monday.

Dr. O. E. Ault, Canadian consul-general, said Saturday the Jonquiere would be given temporary repairs in San Francisco.

The Jonquiere will return to Esquimalt for permanent repairs next Friday, in company with HMCS Yukon, Sussexvale and New Glasgow, which are returning from a Central American cruise.

Wilson Threatens House of Lords

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters)—Prime Minister Wilson warned Saturday that if the House of Lords opposes "government business" he would seek a mandate at the next general election to end their power to block legislation passed by the House of Commons.

Wilson told a local Labor party conference:

"Their lordships have already taken the bit between their teeth with anti-government votes on various issues," he said.

NO TROUBLE YET

"So far none of these has amounted to more than an expression of their peculiar aristocratic opinions."

Wilson said if the opposition Conservatives used the House of Lords as a means of frustrating or holding up government business he would reserve the right to seek an electoral mandate to amend the Parliamentary Act.

Wilson said Labor did not plan an early general election.

But, he added, the government would not hesitate to go to the country if "factious opposition" made it impossible to get its program through.

Crew Fights Ship Fire

EASTBOURNE, England (AP)—With flames gushing out of his ship after a collision, Capt. Trygve Tie of the Norwegian tanker Nora stood fast on his bridge Saturday and refused the chance of rescue in the English Channel. Seven of his crew fought the fire as his ship was being towed toward the Isle of Wight.

Gives Own Man Ex-Nazi's Post

Erhard Stakes Government's Life

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Erhard risked collapse of his coalition government Saturday by appointing a member of his own Christian Democratic party as West Germany's new justice minister.

He picked Karl Weber, 67, a relatively unknown Bundestag (parliamentary) delegate, to succeed Free Democrat Ewald Bucher. Bucher, a former Nazi, quit Thursday after parliament overrode him and voted to continue the hunt for Nazi murderers five more years.

Bucher had wanted the hunt stopped this year. His Free Democratic Party, the smaller member of the coalition, backed him 100 per cent. It demanded that the justice ministry position be left unfilled until after the Sept. 19 parliamentary election, in order to keep attention focused on the issue.

The Free Democrats hold the balance of power in the present parliament but indications are that they face serious losses and possible extinction in the election. They think they have found a way to make a comeback by advocating an end to new prosecutions of war crimes. Polls show the West German people are against these reminders of the ugly past.

The chancellor, with his political life at stake in the election, was not ready to humor another party on a vote-getting issue with these possibilities.

The Free Democrats called a meeting of their leaders for Wednesday to decide whether to break up the coalition. A party spokesman told a press conference he did not foresee any developments that would lead to the other four Free Democratic ministers resigning but warned there could be no certainty until Wednesday.

For Erhard the loss of the Free Democrats would be serious, but not necessarily fatal.

Hitchhiker's Thumb Rises From Waves

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bill Wood was sailing across Vancouver Harbor in his sloop when a hitchhiker's thumb poked out of the water.

He picked up two tired scuba divers and took them close to shore.

FBI Tried Bribery Says Klan

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Ku Klux Klan leaders Saturday angrily accused the FBI of trying to bribe one of four Klansmen charged with conspiracy in the night-rider killing of a white housewife who joined a civil rights march to the capitol.

The charge was coupled with new criticism of President Johnson's stinging verbal attack on the robed order when he disclosed the arrests Friday.

State agents worked toward possible murder charges in the Thursday night shooting death of Viola Gregg Liuzzo, 39, of Detroit. About 200 demonstrators led by a minister from Toronto marched at Selma in protest of the murder.

580 ACRES

Klan lawyer Matt H. Murphy Jr., retained by the Klan to defend the men, said at a press conference in Birmingham the FBI offered 580 acres of land in Minnesota to Gary Tommy Rowe Jr., 34, for information about the murder. Rowe is one of the four arrested.

Murphy said the federal government is trying to make Rowe "frame the Imperial Wizard of the KKK and trying to make him break the Klan's back."

NO COMMENT

FBI agent Everett Ingram of the Birmingham office declined comment. A justice department spokesman in Washington said the proper forum for comment "is in court."

Murphy said his clients are innocent.

Robert M. Shelton Jr., of Tuscaloosa, Imperial Wizard of the United Klans, said the Klan put up $150,000 bonds for three of the men—including Rowe. The fourth was denied bail.

"We've had these trumped-up charges by the federal govern-

'Minister Dying Anyway'

BOSTON (UPI)—The Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan said Saturday in Birmingham, Ala., that Rev. James Reeb of Boston was dying of cancer before he was clubbed to death in Selma earlier this month. Robert Shelton said the minister "would have lived a very short time even if he had been given good medical attention following the alleged beating."

In Boston, John Sullivan, New England chairman of the American Friends Service Committee, replied that Mr. Reeb had undergone a physical examination late last year and was "in the pink of health."

At Easter Recess

Pearson May Visit Troops in Cyprus

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson hopes to visit Canadians serving with United Nations forces on Cyprus and the Gaza Strip during Parliament's Easter recess, he announced at a banquet here.

He said he may also visit Canadian NATO bases at Marville, France, and Soest, Germany.

Mr. Pearson emphasized however, that the trip was tentative because he is uncertain whether the recess will be long enough to allow him the necessary 10 days out of the country.

In Nicosia, reports of the projected visit appeared in the Greek-Cypriot press, saying the trip would be an extension of a visit to Second World War graves at Salonika in Greece.

Well-informed sources said the trip would probably be of an unofficial nature—that is, Mr. Pearson would not attempt anything more than the briefest courtesy meeting with Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, and Dr. Fazil Kuchuk, vice-president and leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community.

They said if the trip materialized, it would likely involve only a one-day visit.

Play with Matches Causes Havoc

By GARY OAKES

A family of nine fled to safety Saturday afternoon after fire ripped through the front of their large wooden home.

Two children playing with matches under the front porch of the house at 1611 Pembroke were blamed for the blaze, which firemen estimated caused $3,000 damage.

Hubert DeForge, a 24-year-old VMD worker, his wife Beverly, their five children ranging in age from two months to six years, Mrs. DeForge's mother, Mrs. Theresa Palmer, and Mr. DeForge's grandfather, 81-year-old Joseph Lecroix, all had to flee the house.

DOZEN FIREMEN

A dozen firemen and two trucks from the city's two halls were called in to fight the blaze shortly after 4:30 p.m.

By the time they arrived, as one fireman put it: "It was going like hell" over the front of the old shingle-sided house.

TOOK AN HOUR

It took about an hour to quell the blaze as firemen had to chop through the front part of the roof to get at tiny stubborn pockets of flame.

Mr. DeForge said he was upstairs talking to his grandfather when Mrs. Palmer shouted that the house was on fire.

Mrs. DeForge and her mother hustled the children out of the house while Mr. DeForge helped the grandfather.

CEILING COLLAPSED

Later Mr. DeForge said that apart from being slightly upset, no one was injured, although he suffered slight burns when the basement ceiling collapsed while he was di-

Tory MP Believes

Big Three Balance

China Brings U.S., Russia Together

WICHITA, Kan. (CP) — The emergence of China as a world power could mean the end of the cold war between Russia and the United States, Alvin Hamilton said here Saturday.

The Conservative MP for Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, told the annual Kansas Institute of International Relations that with three major powers in the world, it would seem "the strategy of each of the big powers would be to play 'odd-man out'."

"Could it be that Russia is trying to disentangle itself from its confrontation with the U.S.? Could it be that China is trying to keep Russia and the U.S. entangled?"

He said that looking at the histories of the three powers, and recognizing all three were nationalistically inclined, it was a case of "which two nations have the greatest basic reasons for confrontation?"

He said on his trip to China in 1960 as Canadian agriculture minister to help negotiate wheat sales, he found that Chinese politicians were "very sensitive" to public opinion.

China was over the crop difficulties of 1959-61, yet they still bought Canadian wheat "to mix with theirs to make better bread."

"A consumer demand had developed which the government heeded."

This was likely the same reason that Russia purchased Western wheat in 1963.

"Possibly consumer demand for the better life is the new positive factor for peace in the world today."

Although Canada and the U.S. share the same reaction to events because of geography, "we still have a Canadian view."

"Canadians want to talk trade with the Chinese. We hope that some day the Americans will want to trade with them, too."

He said from the point of view of the world, "most of us hope that China will come into the UN" and be recognized by all nations.

"We had the experience of turning our backs on Japan in 1922. Many men paid a heavy price for the clash that that move made inevitable.

"Let us learn the lesson."

That Was the Show

Subtle Satire Smooth, Slick Side-Splitting

By JOAN MASON HURLEY

I forgot where I was last night.

I could have been in London or New York, I certainly left the Royal Theatre in spirit.

I was wafted away by That Was the Week That Was into a subtle, satirical, sophisticated world.

BEAUTIFULLY TIMED

A tiny audience at the early show had their funny bones tickled uproariously by six smooth performers from the original BBC television show, whose slick professionalism showed in every beautifully-timed inflection and gesture.

Completely iconclastic but completely delightful, treading on everybody's toes, but on nobody's corns, TW3 skipped through the evening with the audience reeling with laughter in its wake.

Many of their numbers were so naughty, but so nice, and delivered with such good humor one could only be charmed and never shocked.

BIG BUILD UP

One example of this was a skit on "The Pill." The two performers were so embarrassed that the audience was not, in tact it howled until it nearly split its collective side.

The hallmark of TW3's humor is the big build-up and then the undercut with the unexpected. Time and again this fooled the audience into anticipating a joke, but when it came it was entirely different and infinitely funnier.

Two of the best were William Rushton's News, which was taken from the Old Testament and utterly hilarious, delivered as it was in modern radio style; and Bill Oddie's Governor Wallace, who, when he arrived in Heaven, discovered God to be a Negro!

AUDIENCE LATE

There was a delightful spoof on the Hallelujah Chorus, which started out being sung by a choir in surplices and ended up being Yeh Yeh Yeh by you-know-who.

The early show began at 7 p.m. which meant that a considerable number of people arrived punctually at 7:10. This involved starting and finishing late so that the capacity 9 p.m. audience had to wait in the street.

Surgery Can Repair Hernia —And Sooner the Better

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: Please discuss hernia. At what stage can it be called critical? Is surgery the only recourse? — S.B.

Dear Doctor: I am 80 and have had a hernia in my groin for 15 years. Though I wear a truss, lately there has been some protusion accompanied by considerable pain, which I have been able to control by immediate rest and massage.

At my age I would prefer not to have an operation. Do you think that with a tightly fitting truss (the present one is slightly slack) I can expect safety? — R.P.

A hernia (or rupture) is a weak place, fault or gap in the abdominal wall. (There can be ruptures elsewhere, of course, but this location is usually indicated when we speak of hernias.)

Hernia is far more common in men. Read up on anatomy if you care about that.

A truss is a spring-steel gadget which presses a pad over the weak spot, and is a temporary expedient like sandbags when a levee is threatening to break. It's better to have the hernia repaired permanently, at the first good opportunity. Meaning surgery.

ONLY TEMPORARY

There are some so-called "injection methods" which are supposed to strengthen the weak place by building up scar tissue.

I don't think they will work except in small hernias, and even then I am afraid they are usually temporary. Sooner or later surgery is needed, so why not do it first instead of second? It's cheaper in the long run, and safer. So I consistently refuse to indorse these "avoid-surgery" methods.

There comes an age (R.P.'s letter above is an example) when a decision is necessary — whether to have an operation or get along with a truss. This is hindsight, of course, but I think R.P. would have been much happier, and felt more secure, if he had had surgery 15 years ago, when he was only 65. At 80? He could still have the operation.

The danger period (to answer S.B.'s question) becomes critical when a protruding loop of the intestine is trapped. A small hernia may become strangulated more readily than a large one. Hence the size of the rupture is not an index of its potential seriousness.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have blood in my urine, not all the time, but once in a while. I am 33 and scared. What is your opinion?—B.K.

It could mean ulceration, infection or stones in the bladder or kidney, a growth of some sort, whether benign or not. It should be checked at once by your doctor. It might be serious; it might not. But don't take a chance.

NOTE TO MRS. J.H.S.: No, a routine blood test does NOT "give a preview of possible cancer of the bowel, bladder or female organs." And a white vaginal discharge in all probability has nothing to do with possible malignancy.

Life's Misunderstandings Seen in Student Plays

By IAN ARROL

The message of two student plays at Gordon Head Theatre, University of Victoria, Friday and Saturday seemed to be that life can be defined as a series of misunderstandings.

The particular misunderstandings that caused the characters of the plays to be alienated from one another were not clearly indicated in either Charles Standbury's Dog in a Car or Louis Capson's Once Inside an Alien.

Once Inside an Alien appeared to be a personal nightmare with no universal validity—unless the import of the play was perhaps intended to be that life is a personal nightmare for everyone, each living in his own unrelated agony of non-communication.

CLEVER LINES

Charles Stanbury gave his actors some clever lines and they were well handled by his husband-wife lovers Wally and Babs as played by Jim Andrews and Sandra Millen.

Another feature of the evening was Improvisations with Ailsa Bishop, Michelle Bradshaw, Jean Dunlop, Dougal Fraser, Daphne Gillespie and Leida Grant.

FUN FOR ALL

Director Carl Hare asked the audience to choose topic, mood and props for the vignettes. The result was fun for the audience and performers, the wit of bon mots and movements often hilarious.

Full houses both nights should serve an encouragement for more such experimental nights of theatre next season.

The family was moving to a new home in Langford Saturday, and Mrs. DeForge was thankful "we have a place to go."

At 6 p.m. firemen were rolling up equipment when one of them noticed branches of an overhanging oak tree from the neighboring yard smouldering, and hosed it down "just in case."

From the front the house had the appearance of being completely gutted but the sides and back were untouched. Freshly-washed laundry hung from a clothes line in the back yard, in peaceful contrast to the destruction in front.

Smoke Bomb Sows Confusion

Hooded Gunmen Grab $500,000 in Jewelry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four gunmen, wearing hoods and tossing a smoke bomb to cover their escape, took gems valued at possibly $500,000 from a jewelry shop within I. Magnin's fashionable Wilshire Boulevard department store Saturday.

No shots were fired and no one was reported injured, but at least a score of customers and employees were caught in the uproar and confusion of the robbery.

S. W. Laykin, president of Laykin et Cie firm, said of an unofficial $500,000 estimate: "It could be more, it could be less."

GAVE ALARM

Manager Thomas C. Wolfe said a man with a revolver entered his office and told him to lie on the floor. He did, but he also pressed a hidden alarm button.

"Then I could hear all the noise," said Wolfe. "I just got up and ran—right into some other man with a gun.

"I dove behind a series of cases, then crawled along on my hands and knees to a telephone, pulled it down and called police.

SMASHING CASES

"I could certainly tell they were still there, smashing away at the glass cases and making all kinds of noise — shouting, banging on things, trying to create a lot of ruckus. A charming bunch, just a charming bunch.

"This one man was standing in the middle of the floor. He had people lying all over the place—about 12 of them at least, and he was standing over them with a gun."

Detective Sgt. R. L. Sauter said the four came in the employees entrance at 10:20 a.m. and pushed a security employee ahead of them into the store.

HURLED BOMB

While one stood guard over the employees and customers on the floor, at least two others smashed showcases and scooped up diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds.

They then hurled a smoke bomb, ran out a side entrance, escaped in a panel truck, then switched to a sedan with stolen license plates.

U.S. to Send More Troops?

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor headed for Washington Saturday night apparently with a good report on American-South Vietnamese air strikes in North Viet Nam but with only fair things to say about the progress of the ground war in the south.

It was considered highly likely here that Taylor—on his second trip home since November—will raise the question of bringing in more U.S. troops to guard strategic installations. Two battalions of U.S. Marines are guarding the vital Da Nang base and reliable sources say Marine warplanes may be brought in to back them up.

SHIP BLASTED

Despite rigid security round Da Nang, Viet Cong frogmen slipped into the harbor Saturday and blew holes in the hull of a U.S. landing ship-tank tied up at a commercial dock. A cargo of supplies and vehicles had been unloaded.

Officials have expressed concern about the Saigon base and one at nearby Bien Hoa. Both are the responsibility of the South Vietnamese. Bien Hoa, just outside Saigon, fell under heavy mortar attack last year.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

Taylor, however, is expected to bear a much more optimistic report than the one he carried home in November.

He is reported to believe that the United States is making good progress in working with the South Vietnamese and that the government of Premier Phan Huy Quat is taking hold.

Two in B.C. Get Rich In Sweeps

From CP

Nineteen Canadians, only two of them in B.C., will share $1,380,000 in Irish sweepstakes prizes on the first three horses in the Grand National steeplechase Saturday at Aintree, England.

G. T. Pearce of Langley was the only B.C. resident among five winners of $150,000 each on first-place Jay Trump. There were also seven $60,000 prizes on second-place Freddie and seven $30,000 awards on third-place M . Jones.

SPLIT TICKET

One of the latter was Max Richards, 58, a smelting plant boilermaker at Trail whose sister in England sends him a ticket every sweep on the understanding they'll split the winnings.

The 22 Vancouver Islanders who held Irish tickets will have to settle for a total of just under $25,000 in consolation prizes.

Each of the 22, a dozen of whom live in Greater Victoria, will win about $1,100 as their horses ran out of the top three places.

Car Mishap Injures Girl

An Esquimalt girl was reported in good condition Saturday night after being struck by a car while crossing Esquimalt Road at Rothwell.

Cheryl Drover, 10, of 748 Esquimalt Road, was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment for hip injuries and face cuts.

The intersection is controlled by a pedestrian-activated traffic light and crosswalk.

Police identified the driver of the car as Richard J. Drinkwater, of HMCS Stettler.

Troops Land in Cyprus

Queen's Own Advance Party Moves Into Trouble Spots

NICOSIA (CP) — The third batch of Canadian troops to see duty in Cyprus has begun to take over in most of the island's potential trouble spots.

An advance party of 150 men arrived in Nicosia at week's end and immediately began scattering into the Kyrenia Mountains, 15 miles north of here, and along the adjacent northern coast to pick up duties as peace-keepers, mediators and administrators with the United Nations force.

AIRLIFT CONTINUES

From now until April 10, turbine - propeller - driver RCAF Yukon aircraft will be arriving at the rate of one every two days with as many as 125 men each until all 700 men of the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada have been transported here from Victoria along with 95 members of the Reconnaissance Squadron of the Royal Canadian Dragoons from Camp Gagetown, N.B.

The same aircraft will carry back to Canada men who have been doing the peace-keeping duties here for the last six months—members of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Guards from Picton, Ont.; and Lord Strathcona's Horse of Calgary.

HEADQUARTERS STAFF

At the same time 130 members of the Canadian contingent headquarters staff from various regiments and military services are being rotated. And later in April, replacements will arrive for 175 men who make up the headquarters staff for the Nicosia zone—men who handle administrative duties for the UN personnel.

By the end of April, the entire 1,100-man Canadian force will have been changed.

Seeking election are Neil Reimer, Alberta leader of the New Democratic Party; Social Crediter Arthur Leonard, an Edson grocery store owner; Edson accountant Jon Scott of the Conservatives and Hinton druggist William Switzer, Liberal.

VANCOUVER (CP) — After precisely a month of sunshine, the Vancouver area awoke this morning under a blanket of snow as deep as five inches in places.

Most parts of Vancouver and the North Shore, which lies across Burrard Inlet, had about half an inch.

Churchmen Say:

'No Doubt Christ Died on Cross'

TORONTO (CP)—A claim by the International Foundation for the Holy Shroud, with headquarters in London, that Christ merely fainted and didn't die on the Cross was called nonsense here Friday.

Spokesmen for the United Church of Canada, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Anglican Church of Canada, and the Roman Catholic Church all said Christ literally died and later rose from the dead.

Early this week, Dr. J. G. Bourne, a senior anaesthetist at a London hospital, said Christ merely fainted on the Cross and later recovered from a coma.

SHROUD PHOTOS

He based his opinion on investigations of patients who fainted under general anaesthesia while in dentists' chairs.

The foundation has several photographs taken of a shroud kept in the Roman Catholic cathedral at Turin, Italy, which many Christians believe covered Christ's body after it was taken from the Cross at Calvary.

The foundation claims the shroud acted as a photographic negative to show blood stains from Christ's wounds. But if he had been dead, there would have been no blood stains because a corpse has no blood pressure.

Rev. Earl Lautenschlager, principal of the United Church's Emmanuel theological college, said the foundation's theory "has been mentioned by people of every generation since the First Century AD."

"All we know is what is written in the Scriptures. It's the only evidence."

Victorian Meets Queen

LONDON (CP) — Two Canadian veterans joined 300 war-blinded men and women from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Republic and Britain in being presented to the Queen Friday.

J. J. Doucet, 44, of Toronto and C. F. Hornsby, 72, of Victoria met the Queen at St. James's Palace during a reception marking the 50th anniversary of the St. Dunstan's Society, an institution founded for the blind by Sir Arthur Pearson, British newspaper and magazine publisher who is himself a blind former soldier.

ment before," Shelton said. He apologized for calling President Johnson a "damned liar" Friday and amended it by striking the profanity—"but the other part sticks."

MEMORIAL SERVICES

Memorial services for the slain woman were set for Sunday at Selma and nearby Marion.

Governor George W. Romney proclaimed a state of mourning Monday and Tuesday in Michigan.

"This shocking murder can stand for all as an ironic symbol of the need to battle on for the cause for which she died and to ultimately insure that her death was not in vain," he said.

An estimated 16,000 messages of condolences poured into the Liuzzo home where grieving Anthony Liuzzo, the husband, said his wife "died doing what she believed in."

While Alabama moved uncertainly into the 11th week of a civil rights drive centred on Negro voting power, Governor John J. McKeithen of Louisiana flew into Jonesboro, La., and conferred with Negro leaders protesting school facilities.

Mrs. Liuzzo was among the 25,000 who marched. She was returning to Montgomery for a second group of marchers when a car pulled alongside and bullets raked her car.

Mr. Fulton's Decision

THE ANNOUNCEMENT by Kamloops' 71-year-old Conservative federal member Dr. Charles J. M. Willoughby that he intends to retire at the end of the present Parliament provides a convenient opportunity for the return of provincial Tory leader E. Davie Fulton to national politics if he so desires.

Certainly his presence in Ottawa where he had firmly established his reputation as an astute parliamentarian and an able cabinet minister has been as sadly missed as his somewhat less than successful incursion into the provincial field has been regretted.

If Mr. Fulton decides to re-enter federal politics, as it is to be hoped he does, it could be anticipated that he would have little trouble in winning the Kamloops seat in any forthcoming general election, having previously successfully served as member for that constituency from 1945 until he resigned in 1963 to take over the leadership of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative Party.

Further to this his rejoining of the federal Tories would undoubtedly give the national party some much needed additional strength. It is even possible that by returning to the fold he may set an example which might be followed by such outstanding former Conservative cabinet ministers as George Hees and Donald Fleming.

These men—along with such stalwarts as former external affairs minister Howard Green and a number of the present front-ranking Conservative members already sitting in the House—could present to the public on the hustings such a top team combining ability, youth and experience that the sadly vacillating and morally depleted Liberal Party would be hard put indeed to repeat its 1963 election victory.

It is expected that Mr. Fulton will make his decision within the next week after consultations with the provincial party executive. Upon it may depend many things including his own future, the possible revitalization of the federal party and even the result of the next and imminent national election.

Beckoning Visitors

INDICATIVE of the still-growing interest in Vancouver Island as a holiday country and the conviction on the part of the big travel organizations in the United States of the irresistible attractions of the cities and scenery of this area, and the seas around us, is the campaign now in progress of one of our southerly neighbor's most progressive airlines.

One facet of Western Airlines search for business in a "Go North for Vacations" drive is its optimistic advertising. For example, in every Sunday newspaper in California there will appear in April an eight-page color rotogravure insertion depicting the advantages and attractions of a B.C. holiday, with particular emphasis on Vancouver Island, Victoria, Nanaimo, Campbell River and the Albernis. This feature will go into no fewer than 4,193,000 homes. The readership might be calculated to reach a minimum of 12,000,000.

The cost will be $135,000 for this gambit.

Take into consideration the fact that Western Airlines has no direct connection with B.C., and the company's belief in the drawing power of this area comes into proper perspective.

British Columbia Ferries are making a contribution to Western's campaign, not only with cash but with an energetic program of personalized advertising. In conjunction with other business and publicity-conscious groups, including provincial and civic governments, they are invading the California market with a selected battalion of speakers. The Los Angeles Goodwill Tour of April 5 to 14 will take these representatives before some 90 clubs and organizations with their well-prepared addresses and colorful slides.

This is just one aspect of a cleverly-conceived and forward-thinking campaign.

There's one thing about scenery: you can sell it over and over again. All the possessors of this wealth are required to do is open the door to the visitors and help them with courtesy and civility on their various ways.

Small Potatoes

A SHORT TIME ago a New York economist visiting Victoria predicted that not very far in the future, the top 10 per cent of the population—the super-educated—will be drastically overworked and the remainder unemployed. This, Mr. Robert Theobald said, will be the result of automation.

Now Mr. Joseph Morris, the executive vice-president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, presents a similar prediction in slightly different form. With the fulfilment of automation, Mr. Morris suggests, the work necessary to maintain the present standard of living may be done by 5 per cent of the people, but a constantly changing 5 per cent so that all will make their contribution and take their responsibility to society. A man may work for only two years of his lifetime.

One can readily doubt the accuracy of either conjecture.

Mr. Theobald's theory seems to overlook that there are hundreds of varieties of human employment that are hardly likely to be eliminated by machines, nor will need the services of the super-educated. We are not going to call a computer when the plumbing is blocked or the car breaks down. And spare us the day of the universal, unheeding, robot salesman. Or waitress. Or policeman.

Mr. Morris' forecast likewise appears somewhat unrealistic, for another reason. The system he envisages would surely call for too fast a changeover of workers for any degree of efficiency except in the simplest of labors. And it is difficult to imagine many people willingly undergoing the rigors of intensive study or training in preparation for a two-year career in a skilled vocation.

Nevertheless there seems to be reasonable foundation for the opinion that we are moving with some rapidity in the direction of a society in which most of the people would be state-supported most of the time from birth to death; in which the taxes on the production of the machines and on the minority who were employed in gainful occupations would have to provide a good living and ample buying power for the workless majority.

And if that is the shape of things to come, Canadians who worry today about the financing of the pension plan, medicare, education and the like may take some comfort out of the present situation. For as the saying goes, they ain't seen nothing yet.

Canada and the OAS

Increasing Pressure to Join

By GEORGE G. VINCENT
(First of Two Parts)

SHOULD Canada join the Organization of American States? The die will almost certainly be quickly cast in the affirmative, if the present government is returned to substantial power in the next federal general election.

A step of tremendous import, affecting both Canada's independence of action and her position in the Commonwealth will then have been taken before a generally uninformed and therefore indifferent public will know whether to weep or cheer.

The long process of seduction, or honorable wooing—whichever way one looks at it—has increased in fervor over the past few years. But ever since 1910 a special chair with Canada's name on it has waited invitingly in the Washington, D.C., headquarters of the OAS and its predecessor, the Pan - American Union. And it was specifically to encourage Canadian membership that the 1947 Rio Pact of Mutual Assistance discarded the word "republics" in the OAS charter, for the more accommodating nomenclature "states."

It has been a coy business, but the voices of political and industrial leaders who favor membership, including the prime minister and the Hon. Paul Martin, have been, of late, increasingly loud and clear, echoing the eager urgings of persuasive Uncle Sam.

And why not? The charter of this impressive club of some 20 Latin American republics and the U.S.A. is so plainly against sin. The OAS was established, "To achieve an order of peace and justice, to promote their solidarity, to strengthen their collaboration, and to defend their sovereignty, their territorial integrity and their independence."

Who can quarrel with that? Canada is a nation of the Americas—so the pro-membership argument runs—on the fate of the hemisphere depends her fate. The forces that would destroy our freedom have infiltrated Central America and our twin continent, with its staggering social and economic problems, including the greatest population explosion on earth. Morally and materially, from every reason from crusade to trade, Canada must play her part in a common front against communism, dictatorship and hunger, and aid her best and biggest friend, the U.S.A., in her tremendous efforts to aid the other members of the OAS to save themselves. Why, then, the wistful wobble that cynics both within and beyond our borders proclaim has been our policy for so many years?

A Mexican politician put it to me bitterly: "Canada craves the benefits without the responsibilities, buffered as she is against Communist menace by the U.S.A. But time is running out. If the OAS collapses, and with it the hemisphere, she will go down with it. If it survives and saves the Latin nations and hence perhaps the world, without her support through membership, no one will want or respect her. She will be the outcast of the Americas!"

"Fine words"—runs the counter-argument—"and maybe the $1,000,000 or more in annual membership dues, plus many millions more to the Inter-American Development Bank and the continuous aid which, as the second "have" nation we'd be bound to give to the Alliance for Progress would, on the face of it, be justified. But let us take a look at some of the commitments Canada would assume:

Article 15 of the OAS Charter says: "No state or group of states has the right to intervene, directly or indirectly, for any reason whatever, in the internal or external affairs of any other state." Article 19 states: "Measures for the maintenance of peace and security in accordance with existing treaties do not constitute violation of principles set forth in Articles 15 and 17." (No. 17 is against the use of military force. The Rio Pact, binding on the present members of the OAS proclaims: "An armed attack by any state against an American state shall be considered an attack against all American states and consequently each one of the . . . parties undertakes to assist in meeting the attack. . ."

"Then"—continues the argument—"consider the resolution which the late John Foster Dulles succeeded in having adopted at the first Inter-American Conference under OAS auspices in 1954, which solemnly asserts that Communist control of any American state is foreign intervention and a threat to the peace of the hemisphere.

"What does this angle of contradictory and dubious commitments add up to?

"What is 'armed attack' under the weird conditons of the post-war world?

"When does 'Communist control' begin? What if Salvador Allende had won the Chilean presidential election with his Socialist - Communist coalition last year, as well he might have? What if Peron is re-elected to power in Argentina, against all U.S. wishes, and inaugurates a far left-wing regime?

"Who is the first aggressor in these days of parachutist infiltrators and long-range missiles, plus ill-defined and disputed borders in many areas of Central and South America?

"Who affixes the fatal labels and calls the deadly tune?

"Let us not fool ourselves," say these opponents to Canadian membership. "True, the Rio Pact makes it clear that no state can be required to use force without its consent. But it is equally plain that the U.S.A. would not tolerate any Latin-American government that did not fit in with its ideas of anti-communism. The U.S.A. has, supposedly, only one voice and one vote in the OAS. But with the overwhelming human, financial, technical, material and military strength, she is the undisguised boss!"

Noxious Nuisance

From Colonist Files

"SPICK and span with new paint and kalsomine, bright curtains of homespun, freshly upholstered chairs and couches, and cupboards filled with sparkling glass and china," the Salvation Army's "Three Services" dry canteen on Broad Street was all ready for its formal opening, 25 years ago.

The centre contained a big main recreation hall, a 36-bed dormitory, library, writing room, a "get-together corner" where wives and friends could be entertained and the actual canteen and kitchen.

The third annual meeting of the Community Chest was told that an analysis of campaign results had brought out an interesting point: that while in pre-Community Chest days the social work of the city was financed by less than 2,000 known contributors, the number had risen in 1940 to 8,198.

Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council celebrated 50 years of progress in the organization of labor with a golden jubilee banquet attended by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hamber, Labor Minister George S. Pearson and the mayor and reeves of Greater Victoria.

A visit to the Willows camp where the soldiers were being trained was like entering a new world, the Colonist reported 50 years ago.

"You leave behind the remembrance of hard times and business depression, and find yourself in a little world of hustling, restless activity. No one here is idle. Everywhere are men in their serviceable khaki shirts and rough trousers of the same businesslike color.

"Every man you pass walks smartly, as though bent on some important mission. . . . Even the men who are not on duty are busy playing football in the space near the building used as sleeping quarters."

As for these quarters: "You will find yourself in a huge room and all about you you will see, in exact lines, the rough mattresses on the bare floor on which the soldiers sleep. Each man's bed is neatly rolled and his kit is piled in a compact heap. . . . There is evident a perfect system and order in everything."

The fire department had a "splendid drill" with its new aerial truck and steamer 75 years ago—no matter that there were some unfortunate consequences.

"A stream of water was thrown on the Driard block from the top of the extension ladder, but to the disgust of the proprietors of the hotel, a quantity of water found its way down the chimney into the parlors, damaging the carpet and some of the furniture.

"Despite the unpleasantness, however, the boys drilled well and showed that they knew how to handle their new apparatus."

Victoria "solicited a voluntary rate" from occupiers and proprietors of houses and land for the purpose of "clearing the sewers and streets," 100 years ago, and the Colonist commented:

"It will be seen that the council have taken steps to remedy the present disgraceful condition of our principal thoroughfares. The services of the chain gang will be applied for, and the acting town clerk is directed to . . . solicit contributions toward a fund to assist in removing the mud and filth that has been accumulating until the health of the city is in positive jeopardy.

"We feel satisfied that all will cheerfully give according to their means to aid in the completion of a work of paramount importance . . . before the warm weather renders the nuisance doubly noxious."

The steamer Thames arrived from Alberni, bringing down 11 passengers "including two ladies and their families," and it was reported that "the only white people now at Alberni are Mr. and Mrs. George, left in charge of the mills; Mr. Taylor, on the farm, and Mr. Reid who intends going to Se-shat to engage in cod fishing."

Welcome Drop In Fallout

From The Gazette, Montreal

REGULAR government samplings have shown that radioactive fallout in Canada decreased remarkably last year. It was as much as six to eight times lower than the figures for 1963.

This is very welcome news. It shows that the massive amounts of fallout from the last Russian and American test series have now been almost exhausted. Further, it is clear that the Chinese and French tests have had little effect.

Fallout, of course, is not going to disappear suddenly. The fact that it is decreasing does not mean it is about to vanish. But it can now be certain that the worst is over, unless the test-ban agreement should be broken, or unless there is a major war.

It has often been said that the amounts of fallout released by all the nuclear tests has not been enough to hurt human health significantly. But this is a field in which is its difficult to be certain of anything. The public will definitely welcome the news that the worst is probably over.

Now that something has been done about fallout, through the ending of the massive nuclear test series, and by the passing of the test-ban treaty, it is important to see that everything is done to prevent a return to the situation of several years ago. No doubt there will be a few further French and Chinese tests. But mankind deserves to be spared another bout of indiscriminate poisoning of the air.

From the Scriptures

And it shall come to pass, saith the Lord, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear.—Isaiah 65:24.

Accursed Feud

Time to Forgive

By CASSANDRA from London

"WE have seen and read about what I believe is a historic meeting," said Mr. Harold Wilson, "between the Taoiseach and the prime minister of Northern Ireland. I very much hope that a future meeting can take place not in Belfast, not in Dublin, but at No. 10, Downing Street.

"As long as I remain prime minister—and I am young and very fit—there will be no impediment on our side to closer relations."

If these three prime ministers do meet with a common purpose it will be a wonderful occasion.

Mr. Sean Lemass, Mr. O'Neill and Mr. Wilson are all able, flexible and tolerant men.

This quarrel between Eire, Ulster and England has gone on for centuries. But there are new generations growing up now on both sides of the water who never knew the bitterness of the past and who cannot see why Irishmen and Englishmen should not agree.

I remember the curfew in Belfast in the early 20s, I heard the night-shooting down the Falls Road and I saw the British soldiers standing with their rifles stacked on the street corners.

But this is nothing to millions of young people in the Republic, in the Six Counties and in England.

The religious differences between the North and South of Ireland are growing narrower as the martyrdom of the martyrs becomes fainter. The scarred memories of the evil that England, with its rotten landlordism, inflicted on Ireland are fading. The potato famine and the exodus of the immigrants to America are being diffused with the passing of the years.

I am sure that there is a time to forget and a time to forgive and that this accursed feud should now be ended.

Britain in the last two decades has loosened the bonds of imperialism with her one-time dominions the world over. From India to the West Indies, from Africa to Burma, the compulsory ties have been cut and the free association of friendship attempted.

What a triumph it would be for Ireland if the Red Hand of Ulster was crossed in amity with the Shamrock of Eire. The Irish mean more to the English and the English are closer to the Irish than to all the polyglot races that were once compulsorily mustered in the Empire on which the sun never set.

From Lough Swilly to Carnsore Point, from Fairhead to Cape Clear, there is a nation of, I think, rather wonderful people with whom it would be very good for us all to be on more than speaking terms.

The Royal Ulster Rifles have a fine regimental motto. It is "Quis Separabit"—Who shall part us?

I know a better one for Ulster and Eire and England—"Who will unite us?"

In London you can be driven mad by the roar of traffic, the howl of jets, the racket of road-drills and even by the incessant jabbering of the populace.

The sum total is an increasing crescendo of unbearable sound.

As civilization becomes more civilized it becomes rowdier as the bee-loud glades become fewer.

Through the appalling din there comes a whispering plea for silence that I have just seen in a gentle letter from a chap who lives in Central London to his neighbor. He phrases it in the nicest possible way:

"I must apologise for writing to you over a ridiculously small matter, but my wife and I would be grateful if you could move your family's guinea pigs from under our bedroom window.

"The noise these animals make in the early morning is most aggravating and although they have been there for months and months I regret we are unable to get used to them. Your co-operation would be greatly appreciated. Many apologies for worrying you."

It is a marvellous thing that amid all the deafening uproar of the metropolis somebody somewhere can still hear the squeaking, or is it the twittering, or the mewing, or the faint snuffling, or the tiny trumpeting of guinea pigs when the first pale light of dawn creeps round the chimney pots.

I have always been morbidly fascinated by the unsleeping efforts of science to produce such things as a good Stilton cheese direct from the grass and minus the cow, and Whitstable oysters minus the tide and Whitstable and aided by a plastics factory in unholy consort with a rubber extrusion plant.

Now they've done it with chickens.

No roosters, no eggs, no nests, no nothing. Not even a cock-a-doodle-doo.

I bring you the dread news from St. Louis where, very properly in this matter The Blues come from:

"The Ralston-Purina Co. have extracted the protein from the soya bean and forced it through thousands of tiny holes in a platinum spinerette into a coagulating bath. This material is then shipped out to the Worthington Food Co. of Columbus, Ohio, who add flavoring and coloring agents to the bland white protein fibre. The next step involves special treatment so that the rope-like strands are moulded into a close approximation of chicken."

'Status of Puppets'

OUR minister of municipal affairs has said "B.C. municipalities are not creatures of the provincial government." Is it his intention to make them so by introducing Bill 83?

The enthusiasm for public service and pride of achievement of municipal councillors could be so reduced by the proposed legislation, that their status may become no better than puppets mouthing the decisions of others hiding beneath the platform of direct responsibility to our ratepayers.

Capable men and women will think twice before running for civic office where their principal function will be to levy taxes for mini-metro and take the brunt of criticism for expenditures over which they have little or no control.

Immigration

The refusal of the immigration authorities at Winnipeg to allow Professor Mulford Q. Sibley to enter Canada is deplorable and the feeble explanation of the event offered by the immigration minister has done nothing to allay concern. If the decision was a ministerial one it should never have been made; if, as seems more likely, it arose from the malice or stupidity of the local officials it should have been countermanded. On a more practical level it is hardly prudent for a country such as this which is engaged on a large program of university expansion and which recruits up to half its university teachers from other parts of the English-speaking world to extend this sort of welcome to visiting academics.

However it is not for Governor Rolvaag or any other U.S. citizen to protest against this crudely illiberal performance unless he has been active in combatting the odious practices in his own country of which it is an imitation. No advanced democratic society in the world has set such a disgraceful example as the United States of hindering the free movement, whether permanent or temporary, of people, whether citizens or aliens, across its frontiers. The McCarran-Walter Act, the withdrawal of passports from U.S. citizens, the harassment of visiting aliens constitute an obnoxious pattern of primitive chauvinism which Canada would do well not to copy any further.

Viet Nam

The U.S.A. is acting in Viet Nam with a ruthless disregard for the suffering of the people there. Nothing can be more sickening than such an act in the name of "justice" and defending "the right." Where is the justice for the people of Viet Nam, bombed and driven from their homes?

Such action cannot be condoned by civilized people anywhere, and if the United States persists on this course, the rest of the world will see quite plainly that she has joined the ranks of those who have trampled others underfoot to seek their own ends.

Where now is that regard for law and order that characterized the president's action on Selma? It is time the free people everywhere spoke up loudly.

If the United States considers itself an enlightened, civilized nation, concerned with the preservation of freedom and the protection of the rights of others, and wants to be considered as such, then she should act like one.

Russian Advance

So the Russians have "walked" a man in space.

Now, with their profit-oriented society, if they can only find a better way of removing the snow from the streets of Moscow, than with women and children, shovels and trucks, their propaganda claim that they serve the "people" first might carry more weight.

Enabled Cabinet Goes to Work

Now Real B.C. Business Begins

By IAN STREET

How much power does the government wield in the legislature?

In a parliamentary democracy, though public opinion marshalled for the opposition does count for something, the government is the whole show.

It makes the rules, it calls the shots, and on occasion in Premier Bennett's own phrase it chooses to move the goalposts while the game is still in progress.

In fact, now that the longest session in 45 years is over, it can be fairly said the government is shortly to begin the real business of the province.

For government read cabinet. And at the pinnacle of this power structure is the man who holds the purse strings, the premier who is also minister of finance.

Still it would not, I think, be strictly correct to call this a one-man government. Rather, it is government dominated by one man.

Mr. Bennett boasts frequently that his is the easiest job in British Columbia. His ministers run their departments,

which is true; but they must get approval for spending, and it is here that the control is exerted.

The premier also says he is proud of the way some maverick backbenchers like Cyril Shelford and Victoria's J. Donald Smith tweak the tail of the government.

But when the plums are handed out, junkets to represent B.C. at this or that function, these men despite long service are not chosen.

Public opinion did force the government into several concessions during the past session.

Before the legislature opened the Socred caucus prevailed upon the government to pay an extra $1 monthly supplementary allowance to the aged, blind and other handicapped persons.

This was to offset higher bus fares.

Later, when city MLA Don Smith produced 20,000 signatures from pensioners seeking bus passes, the premier announced a surprise $5 increase in the supplementary allowance.

Then there was the $4 annual increase in per capita grants to municipalities. This was another surprise in view of Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell's earlier claim that B.C. municipalities were treated better than those in any other part of Canada.

Again there was no mention in the budget which seemed to indicate this was an afterthought.

Mr. Campbell also backed down on his mini-metro legislation to the extent of inserting a clause giving municipalities and unorganized territories the right to vote on inclusion in any joint service.

Labor Minister Peterson came under heavy opposition attacks for the government's failure to increase absymally low pensions for widows and dependents under Workmen's Compensation.

He agreed to introduce legislation, later passed by the House, to give the cabinet powers to raise these widows' pensions when a royal commission report is received this spring.

Was this an opposition victory or merely a ruse to get the legislature to agree to give cabinet extraordinary powers?

Look at some powers delegated to the cabinet this session:

The right to decide in which chartered banks B.C. buys shares; rates and regulations for medical grants; appointment of directors for the new crown real estate corporation; parks regulations including redrawing of boundaries.

As one MLA commented during the session the legislature is more and more granting enabling legislation and leaving the cabinet to decide working details.

Erhard and War Crimes Decision

Votes Overshadow Plaudits

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN, from London

The new decision by the West German Parliament on war crimes prosecution will likely earn Chancellor Ludwig Erhard only criticism and faint praise abroad although it may win him votes in the forthcoming general election.

The Bundestag voted 344 to 96 last week in favor of the shortest possible extension—4½ years—of the legal deadline for new prosecutions of Nazi criminals.

It seems certain this decision was received with disappointment around the world by people who had been expecting an extension of at least 10 years.

Observers feel the action of the German law-makers can be traced simply enough to the fact an election is scheduled for Sept. 19 with Erhard's coalition government already in trouble for its handling of foreign policy, particularly involving East Germany, Israel and the Arab countries.

The uneasy coalition was formed between the Christian Democrats and the Free Democrats following the last election when the ruling Christian Democratic party failed by eight seats to obtain an over-all majority in the 521-member lower house, or Bundestag.

In the current controversy, the Free Democrats have been opposed to any extension of the statute of limitations where war crimes are concerned and their voice was powerful since Ewald Bucher, the justice minister, is a member of the party.

Bucher, who has tendered his resignation rather than sign the bill, contended the measure violates the German constitution similar to the way in which Adolf Hitler enacted retroactive legislation to suit his own purposes.

Other legislators have hit this argument by noting 76 professors of law at West German universities stated there was no constitutional bar to the legislation.

It was significant the most impassioned plea against Nazi criminals came from a member of the younger generation of Christian Democrats, Dr. Ernst Benda, 40, who said to the applause from all sides of the house March 10 the German people would have to live aware there were murderers among them.

But the Bundestag's ardor had cooled by Thursday. Politicians were keenly aware of public opinion polls indicating further prosecution of Nazi criminals has grown unpopular.

The polls show widespread sentiment in favor of closing the books on the Nazi past, not out of sympathy with offenders but primarily out of concern over damage that current trials may be giving to Germany's name.

The 25-year limit—ending at the close of 1969—will only prevent the opening of new cases but does not prevent the continuation of cases already opened.

It is thus argued only a handful of criminals could possibly escape compared with the 80,000 who have been sentenced by German and non-German courts since the war.

Some observers feel not only in Germany but in, for instance, Britain, is there a mood to forgive and forget. However, Hugh and athor in Germany, wrote and author, wrote recently in the London Sunday Times:

"Our charitable attitude is perhaps the charity of indifference—the easy indifference of the unengaged. Behind it lies an assumption that, by and large, all Germans were guilty of Nazi crimes. The assumption may be true. The tacit complicity of the German people as a whole is undeniable. But must that complicity be continued?

"It is because a new generation in Germany is determined not to deny but to face the fact of that complicity and to pluck out the roots of it, that feeling there is so strong. It may be a feeling of a minority of the population; but a minority can also be an elite."

Strong Quartet Sets Example

Big Enough to Agree

By A. H. MURPHY

It is not unusual for municipalities to snap and snarl at each other when they think their rights are being ignored or flouted but there's no such acrimony at meetings of the intermunicipal committee.

It is edifying, as a matter of fact, to see the way business is conducted in this very necessary forum which reaches across parochial lines in the interests of the area as a whole.

At this time all four participating municipalities are headed by strong men—men who concede none of their municipality's rights but yet are big enough to realize that the good of the district occasionally transcends the privileges of its parts.

There are differences of opinion, of course, but matters are resolved speedily and without bickering. Usual practice is for each representative to state his case and for the chairman (the post revolves with change of venue) to suggest what is, in most cases, the obvious solution. This course is usually followed.

It reminds me of a prisoner-of-war camp I once was in.

Upon entry and after an intensive interrogation by our own security people to make sure I wasn't a ringer, I was taken to Hut 2, Room 2, where I was to spend the next year.

When the door opened a practice scrum was in progress in preparation for a rugby game scheduled for the following day. A sweating body detached itself from the struggling mass, welcomed me and sat me down.

He explained that he was my room leader and that my admission brought the number in the room to 16. It was meant to accommodate six, or at a pinch, eight, he explained, so that living in such conditions took a bit of forbearance.

People were happy in the room this prisoner explained. If they weren't they had the hell beaten out of them.

CITY HALL COMMENT

Bitching, whinging and whining would not be tolerated in the room, he told me. If you had any beefing to do you took it out on the circuit (path around the camp perimeter just inside the wire) and worked it off. That was the place for it, not the room.

Because of this strictly enforced rule our room was one of the best in the camp. Arguments there were in plenty but they were kept under strict control and the slightest show of spite or temper or even gross irrelevancy was met by banishment in the daytime and at night, an order to shut up and stay that way until tomorrow. You disobeyed these orders at the risk of being scragged by one and all.

I hope the analogy isn't too far fetched but what I am trying to say is that the same brisk, non-nonsense spirit which prevailed in our room is present at meetings of the intermunicipal committee.

Members seem to have got all the extraneous babble out of the way before they enter the committee room. When the session begins they know what they want to say. They say it quickly and abide by the chair's decision.

It's a sound body and it does a good job.

Laos Ready For Talks

VIENTIANE (AP) — Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma says he told the Soviet Union his government would be willing to participate in an international conference on Laos if North Vietnamese troops were withdrawn from its territory.

Souvanna, who leads the neutralist faction in Laos, made the statement Friday.

Republics to Air Dictatorship Issue

By HENRY GOETHALS
From Washington

Western hemisphere diplomats are getting ready to take another run at an old question: Where does democracy end and dictatorship begin?

With nine of the 20 Latin American republics now having non-elective governments, the matter is sure to draw attention at the second special inter-American conference. It is scheduled for Rio de Janetro in May.

Venezuela and Costa Rica, the most outspoken foes of non-democratic regimes in the hemisphere, are expected to lead a stiff fight for collective action against governments created by coups d'etat.

Six Latin nations have experienced military coups since early 1962.

Costa Rica and Venezuela are expected to press for an agreement that would permit investigation of coups by the Organization of American States. The OAS would determine whether the new governments fulfilled democratic standards.

The OAS council could recommend whether recognition of the new regime was in order.

Man's Worth Sole Criterion

VANCOUVER (CP)—China no longer bothers with university degrees, says a University of British Columbia professor.

Dr. Casimir C. Lindsay, back from a trip to China, says a student may complete seven years in university and still not be called doctor.

"They told me, 'You judge a man by what he does, not by his degrees.' "

Dr. Lindsay visited China to consult with fisheries scientists and collect specimens for the B.C. Institute of Fisheries, of which he is curator.

He says he was impressed with what he saw.

"I used microscopes and electronic gear made in China that were as good as we have here. A laboratory might be lit with a 15-watt bulb hanging from the ceiling, have bare walls and no furniture. But on the bench would be a practically unlimited amount of electrical apparatus."

Now It's Coin Week

With special weeks set aside each year for the promotion of everything from salads to safe-driving, it seemed only a matter of time until money got into the act.

Canadian Coin Week, sponsored by the Canadian Numismatic Association, will be observed April 24-May 1 this year, giving coin-collectors their own week for the first time.

Two Exhilarating Examples Point Up Moral

Dedicated Youth Models for Elders

School Play Makes History

In a move so far as I can ascertain unprecedented in B.C., a private boys' school play is being brought to a commercial theatre. Brentwood College's Antigone will be produced at the McPherson on Friday, April 23.

Gil Bunch, inspired director of Antigone, is head of the English department at Brentwood. He has taken the raw material of teen-age boys and girls, most of whom have never acted before, and fashioned a magnificent piece of theatre.

I have seen some of his work. Last year I saw his staging of O'Neill's In the Zone. The cast was 16 and 17-year-old schoolboys conveying emotions and experiences they can never have known.

IN A TRANCE

The audience sat in a trance, there was not a sound in that village hall as O'Neill's sailors savagely tormented a man until they had laid bare his soul.

I don't mind admitting that before the curtain fell I was moved to tears.

This is theatre. This is acting. This is what all the costumes and expensive lighting and concomitants cannot achieve alone. This is Art.

And this is what Gil Bunch can do with his students, and what he has done again with Antigone, and what we are lucky enough to be going to see in Victoria.

THE CAST

Hamish Thoms, the Chorus in Antigone, is a graduate of Brentwood and now a first year student at the University of Victoria.

Creon is Barry Greenhalgh from Duncan. He is head boy of Brentwood and has had no previous experience. Antigone is a Strathcona Lodge girl from Vancouver, Barbara Becher. She is only just turning 16 and has never acted before.

The nurse is Millie Sellar, also from Strathcona. She has had a little experience.

SOME SCHEDULE

With these young people Mr. Bunch has created a triumph.

But have you heard of their rehearsal schedule? For four and a half months EVERY night from 8:45 to midnight they practised.

And this isn't all. They wore everything they could lay hands on, for the only building available was a community hall, totally unheated and snow lay deep on the ground for three months up-Island.

This is dedication. And hasn't the result proved the worth of it? Furthermore they are returning early from their Easter vacations to rehearse again so that Antigone may be as perfect as possible.

Would that some of our Victoria groups would practise long enough at least to know their lines!

We can all learn from youth.

Varied Program Opens Tomorrow

Hundred Voices Unite

Timothy Vernon is the conductor tomorrow night and Wednesday at the McPherson Playhouse, in an Evening of Music, presented by the combined University of Victoria choirs of more than 100 voices.

Never before performed in Victoria, the major work will be the Mass in G Minor by the English composer Vaughan Williams. Many Victorians will remember the outstanding performance of his Hodie a few years ago.

This present mass was written in 1922 as a result of Vaughan Williams' study of the old masses of Tallis. It is scored for double choir, and is sung in Latin.

The four soloists are Eleanor Duff, Peggy Walton Packard and Peter Yelland, all well known in the city. The baritone is Harry Hill, versatile English professor at the university, who scored major success in the Yeats plays recently.

The program also includes four short works by Bach, Brahms, Verdi and the Canadian, Healey Willan. In addition there are songs by the contemporary Armenian-American, Alan Hovhannes and madrigal and part songs.

Young Conductor Inspires Singers

"Age must submit to be taught by youth" wrote Edmund Burke to Fanny Burney in 1782. This is a truism well adapted to our local entertainment scene. In particular I am thinking of Timothy Vernon, 18-year-old conductor of the University of Victoria Choir.

When Timothy was three his mother took him to his first symphony concert. Afterwards he was asked which instrument he preferred. Prophetically enough, he replied that he "would like to play the baton."

And so he does. Symphony-goers will recall him conducting the Academic Festival Overture at a recent concert.

STEEPED IN MUSIC

Since his earliest days Timothy has been steeped in music. At seven he started piano lessons with Nora Heimburger and joined Christ Church Cathedral choir, where he sang for seven years. Later, he took organ lessons from Richard Proudman.

None who saw it, five years ago, will ever forget his moving performance in the title role of the opera Amahl and the Night Visitors. When the boy left his mother to go with the three kings I don't believe there was a dry eye left in the cathedral audience.

IN CHARGE AT 18

At 14 Timothy was appointed organist and choirmaster of St. Shad's, at 15 to St. George the Martyr and last year to St. Luke's. In 1960 he won the Best Actor Award at the School Drama Festival for his portrayal of Napoleon in Shaw's Man of Destiny. Then he won a scholarship to the Banff School of Fine Arts.

This ability of Timothy's to act is a great asset in his conducting. It happened that last year I was a member of the large university choir which he helped to train for the St. Matthew Passion.

Timothy, at that time a freshman at the university and 17 years old, held in the palm of his hand an enormous crowd of potentially unruly and blase university students, most of them years older than their young conductor. There was complete silence and complete attention.

THINK—AND SING

I so vividly remember his stirring exhortation to the choir before beginning the famous chorus, "Crucify Him."

In ringing tones he told us that he knew very well that many were philosophy or science students and were atheists, that many did not accept the doctrines of the Passion, but however we felt about the words, Think of the Music, Think of the Man whose life was at stake and SING. And my, how that choir sang!

FUTURE MAPPED

Timothy took Otto - Werner Mueller's conductors' course last summer. At present he is studying violin with Jean Angers, and hopes eventually to learn one instrument of each family in the orchestra as preparation for his future. Timothy plans to go to the Vienna Academy.

Here is a young man whose outstanding talent should take him far, and of whom Victoria will one day be very proud.

Concert to Finance Safari Set by School Musicians

By BERT BINNY

The northern safari of the Mount View High School band to Fort Smith, Yellowknife and Hay River has already been announced. Now the Greater Victoria Schools Symphony orchestra and the Mount Douglas High School Band are also packing their grips: They're heading east for Lethbridge and Calgary.

A mass exodus like this costs money and the symphony orchestra and the band are staging a concert to swell expense funds.

The concert will take place on Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. at Central Junior High.

Mrs. V. De Long conducts the orchestra and Mr. R. Bergeson is director of the band.

The committee of the Greater Victoria Music Festival has announced prices for McPherson Playhouse seats at the Festival Highlights concert on April 30.

These are: Lower floor, $2: Lower balcony, $1.50: Upper balcony, $1. Children, students and membership card holders are admitted at half-price.

The program includes the usual competition for the Rose Bowl and the City Medallion as well as performances by outstanding competitors in the piano, string and vocal classes during the ten-day festival.

Pianist Dwight Peltzer, a faculty member of the Victoria School of Music, will be the soloist at the Victoria Symphony concerts of April 4 and 5.

Mr. Peltzer will be heard in Bartok's 3rd Piano Concerto, this item appearing between performances by the orchestra of Beethoven's Egmont Overture and Dvorak's New World Symphony.

KELOWNA (CP) — Thomas Patrick Waters, 18, of Rutland died Friday night after the collision of his car with another driven by Rutland resident Frederick Westerwoudt.

Westerwoudt was treated and released from hospital.

City Group Off To Show the Flag

Victoria's hopes for representation in the Dominion Drama Festival this year are pinned on a small group of actors who travel this week to Kelowna, for the B.C. regional festival.

"There aren't many plays left in the competition, but those still in will probably give us a run for it," commented Mrs. Vera Trueman, director of Importance of Being Ernest, presented by St. Matthias Little Theatre.

She was commenting on the withdrawal from the festival of The Crucible from Kinnaird Little Theatre. Earlier, another play from Victoria dropped out.

Adjudicator Walter Massey from Montreal now has only four plays to choose between.

The winning play in the B.C. festival must still be judged better than the winner in Alberta, to advance to the Dominion Drama Festival in Brockville, Ontario, in May.

Cast of the Victoria production includes: Richard Litt, Stanley Bowles, Ken Bostock, Jennifer Chaster, Jenefer Allen, Rita Coe and Phyllis Gaskell.

Years Learning Craft Secret of British Success

Training Paved Path to Oscars

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN

It has not gone unremarked that four of the five nominees for Oscars as best actor this year are British. And so are three of the five nominees for best supporting actor.

Julie Andrews is up for best actress, and Gladys Cooper and Dame Edith Evans are nominees for best supporting actress.

Oscar night next week will broaden its A's and drop its R's this year, or British morale will suffer the sharpest drop since Ringo entered wedlock.

While the concentration of Britons on the Oscar lists is remarkably heavy, it's not exactly a shock. It is no secret that the British Isles produce more fine actors and actresses than any place else on earth.

The London theatre offers several delights, and one of them is being able to sit in the balcony for less than $1 or in fourth row centre for maybe $3 top. But another of the delights is that even the turkeys are acted like swans.

The dialogue in a light comedy may have the sparkling gaiety of cold porridge, but you have to listen hard to be double-sure that it isn't Noel Coward at his most lethal.

The tongue is quicker than the ear. Welsh dramas of social protest, played on coal-dark stages and possessed mostly of a stupefying dullness, somehow sound like Shakespeare.

What has given England's stages and, now, the world's movies, their matchless grace and fire is the fact that their players have been learning the craft from an age when most of their contemporaries have been breaking up the beach-chairs at Brighton or Ilfracombe.

The apprenticeship available to—and demanded of—the English actor is the envy of English-speaking actors everywhere, and it ought to be.

When Peter O'Toole decided not to follow his father's trade as a racecourse bookmaker and graduated from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, he joined the Bristol-Old Vic Company. There, he once told me, he played something like 70 parts in three years.

The point is that Lawrence of Arabia may have made O'Toole an overnight star, but he hadn't become an actor overnight.

The Bristol Old Vic is one of some 50 repertory companies scattered around the English provinces. And in one or several of them right now are actors and actresses who may just be sweating out an Academy nomination five or 10 years hence.

Even after she had lit up the screen in Billy Liar, Julie Christie—now filming Dr. Zhivago turned down more movie work and went back to the Birmingham Rep. When I saw her there, she was making $42 a week, doing eight performances a week of an amiable old farce called Thark and rehearsing Brecht's Mother Courage for the next week.

There's a now-sacred mountain above Port Talbot, Wales, where Phil Burton led Richard Burton to develop his voice by shouting Shakespeare into the gales off the Severn Estuary. Burton then did the repertory bit with the Old Vic in London and became an idol to several years worth of schoolgirls before the cameras found him.

Rep doesn't turn tidy profits, but in England financial grants from the cities and the National Arts Council make the difference between breaking even and breaking up for nearly all the companies. Even at coolie wages, which are all the Reps can pay.

The repertory experience doesn't solve everything, of course. A young English actress was recently cast with Dame Edith Evans in a very glossy comedy in London. It quickly became clear that the actress' training did not include high comedy.

The company found a substitute but, not wanting to upset Dame Edith, the director concocted a story that the actress had come down with acute coreopsis.

These tidings were brought to the great lady. "Poor dear," murmured Dame Edith. "I was so afraid she might, from the very first rehearsal."

Buffalo Bill Coach Going Back to U.S.

ASCOT, England (AP)—Buffalo Bill's Wild West "Deadwood" stagecoach is going back to the United States. It was bought at auction for $2,128 by John F. Cuneo who has a museum already containing 75 coaches in Chicago.

Buffalo Bill—William F. Cody—brought the coach to England more than 60 years ago as part of his Western show.

Mainland Theatregoers Advised To Take the Ferry to Victoria!

* * * * * *

Stop the World I Want to Get Off comes to the McPherson on April 1, 2 and 3.

This final triumph of the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre's season was seen by almost 11,000 Vancouverites, and one enthusiastic Vancouver critic advised his readers that if they missed it in Vancouver they should take the ferry over to Victoria to see it!

Starring in the show as Littlechap is D. M. Hughes, of whom it was written: ". . . he is pathetic, intimate, plaintive and utterly charming."

Barbara Jay is the female lead, and of her one critic gushed: "An account of her success would appear to shame everybody else in the cast."

Miss Jay, daughter of a Vancouver alderman, has had immense experience in professional theatre and is said to portray brilliantly the parts of Littlechap's four girl friends, English, German, Russian and American.

There is no change of costume or props to reinforce the characterization, and Miss Jay has to keep a script in the wings in order to remember who she is!

The four girls keep on appearing and reappearing throughout the play, and she has separate mental props for each one so that she can get into character before she appears on stage.

This English musical is as different from most musicals as Oklahoma was from its predecessors. The whole show takes place in a circus tent, emphasizing that life is a circus.

The authors operate on the premise that an audience likes to use its imagination. There is much mime and real acting and several wonderful numbers, including What Kind of Fool Am I?

Stars of Stop The World I Want To Get Off—Barbara Jay and D. M. Hughes—in hilarious scene from musical which comes to Victoria this week.

Pigeon Feeders Sneaky

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — City officials are up in arms over sneaky hit-and-run pigeon feeders.

Don Kay, planning commission chairman, says that plainclothesmen should be deployed on the city streets to curb the unlawful feeding, claiming the flocking birds are a hazard to pedestrians.

"These compulsive pigeon feeders are sly ones. They usually drop the feed from their hands or toss it from the window of a parked car."

'Mousetrap' Goes On and On and On

LONDON (AP) — The time was Nov. 25, 1952.

The curtain on a London stage curled up for the first time on an unambitious murder mystery called The Mousetrap.

The curtain still goes up six nights a week and two matinees on The Mousetrap.

Says British impresario Peter Saunders: "As far as I know, it is now the longest-running play in the world, unless one counts The Drunkard. It is unique . . . a phenomenon of show business."

STATISTICS

Adapted from Agatha Christie's short story, The Mousetrap has grossed more than $2,800,000 in London alone.

It has played in 31 foreign countries.

Last Dec. 9 the play clocked its 5,000th performance in the Ambassadors Theatre in London's West End.

Nearly 2,000,000 persons have seen it here; over the years, more than 70 actors and actresses have appeared in the play's eight roles.

The play is supposed to take place "in the present."

To do this the producer has to do several things. References in the spoken parts to news items have to be kept up to date. Then there is the question of clothes styles.

Dresses have been shortened, lowered and then shortened again—to keep pace with the edicts from Paris.

Repertory Possible At a Price

By PATRICK O'NEILL

Only heavy subsidy from taxpayers will allow professional theatre development in Victoria, according to Sam Payne, actor, director, adjudicator and sometime company manager.

"I don't know whether Victoria can bear the traffic," said Mr. Payne, referring to the large amounts of money needed to operate a good theatrical company in a city.

He played at the McPherson in the leading role in Life With Father which closed last night.

Mr. Payne was also a director of Totem Theatre before it folded in Victoria in May, 1954.

"We were professional, but a non-equity company. We ran on the lowest possible budget. We begged and borrowed everything we could, we were always broke.

"The company failed because of lack of public support. We got no subsidy."

He said professional theatre in a city this size cannot operate on ticket sales.

Mr. Payne pointed out that Seattle Repertory, Manitoba Theatre Centre, Vancouver Playhouse Company are all subsidized.

He said Victoria could have a good repertory company to go with its new playhouse, if it was willing to pay.

But Mr. Payne said subsidies must be applied in the right way.

He said there is a constant danger theatre managers will be "sold a bill of goods."

He pointed to the Elsa Lanchester opening of the McPherson as an example.

"Everybody seems to admit now this was a mistake. When she was here, she had the audacity to say she didn't think she was suited for the opening. Then she walks out with thousands of dollars.

"If her pay cheques had been held up you would have heard about it."

BAD PRODUCTIONS

He criticized the tendency of theatre managers to accept bad productions simply because they have a "name" or come from a bigger city.

"Managements have always been a thing of wonderment to me."

He recalled a production of Pajama Game at Vancouver's Theatre Under the Stars, when Gwen Verdon suddenly announced she wasn't coming from New York to play the lead.

"They phoned an agent in New York. He said he had a wonderful actress, somebody without a name but, you know, from New York!"

AGENT'S WIFE

When she arrived, they found she was the agent's wife, and the size of Vancouver "scared her silly. She admitted she thought she was coming to a hick town!" he said.

Mr. Payne criticized the common practice of putting director's girl friends in a major role whether she can act or not.

He said a recent B.C. production featured a girl in a leading part who "couldn't act her way out of a paper bag." He said she got her role through friendship with the director.

NELL TERRIBLE

"Let's stop the Nell Gwen practice. She was a king's mistress, but because he was a king she was put on the stage and she was terrible."

"This just isn't good enough. When you go to the theatre to see professionals, you expect something better."

Mr. Payne said he could see possibilities for a first-class Victoria professional company which would visit other cities from Vancouver to Toronto, and receive visits from companies in these cities in return.

"But it all has to be paid for," he said.

He recalled the comment of Tyrone Guthrie, when asked to found a theatre at Stratford, Ontario: "This will cost you money, gentlemen, and I mean money! This is no church basement affair."

SAM PAYNE

She Decided at 14 to Be a Star

Barbra Was Born 40

By CECIL SMITH

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — No performer in the modern theatre has gone so far, so fast as Barbra Streisand. From the time she was 19 and dropped the extra "A" in her first name ("Who needs it?") and told people she was born in Madagascar and raised in Rangoon (she was never outside Brooklyn till she was 14), Barbra in less than four years has become a star of such magnitude that she nightly packs the huge Winter Garden on Broadway in a decidedly second-rate show called Funny Girl.

She's booked to do the show through next December.

EXHAUSTING

The show is exhausting because Barbra must carry it almost entirely on her frail shoulders. She's on stage 111 of its 132 minutes.

It isn't the show so much that exhausts Barbra, it's the very fact and the demands of stardom it makes on her.

"It's just that . . . I mean . . .", groping for words . . . "Like the Broadway opening. All the people clamoring around. It was so confusing and I just wanted to be left alone.

"They all wanted to grab me and take my picture. I wanted to think about it. I wanted to be alone.

"And it gets worse. They're always after you to do something . . . they're always after you . . ."

Barbra

She glanced around irritably at one of her managers who was glowering at us for taking so much time. "See what I mean, always after you . . ."

Most stars swim in the glamour of stardom as if it was a pool of champaign. Not Barbra. She never doubted that she was destined to stand on a Broadway stage with the light bathing her and the applause welling up around her. For a slight, carelessly assembled Brooklyn girl with the face of Neretti and a similar of a nose, her supreme confidence is astonishing.

She saw her first play, Diary of Anne Frank, when she was 14—her first trip to Manhattan from Brooklyn. She decided she could do everything Susan Strasberg was doing on the stage.

"I started studying acting" she said, "and when I was like 16 I decided to make the rounds—like they all say, you gotta make the rounds, you know, knock on doors. I spent two days at it and it was so ridiculous. They all say: 'What've you done?' I say: 'Nothing. You wanta hear me read?' And they say: 'No, we got to see your work first.'

ALL SO STUPID

"It was all so stupid. I said: 'Well, you'll be sorry.' I said to 'em: 'You'll come after me, I'm not going to come after you. I'm not going to bang on your door and say hire me. That's your problem.'

"I mean it's just the whole of the thing. I can't force myself down somebody's throat. I gave up the theatre. I said I'm not going to beg for nobody."

The theatre did come after her. Barbra, who thought of herself as an actress, not a singer, and still does, "learned a couple songs" and entered a contest. She won it and was booked into the Bon Soir night club.

STOPPED SHOW

She was cast in a minor part in the musical, I Can Get It for You Wholesale. Her singing stopped the show and was about the only reason to see it. Her first Columbia albums sent the nation into a Streisand frenzy. Her album of Funny Girl has been the top show album of the last year.

I remember someone once asking Barbra how a lass of her tender years (she was 21 then) could know and feel the emotional experiences she can put into a song.

"When I was a kid," she answered "they used to say I was born 40. I don't know what that means . . ."

$50 Can Start a Career

'No Better Investment Than a Scholarship'

TORONTO (CP) — Fifty dollars spent on the right student at the right time can start a career, says Senator Donald Cameron of Alberta.

"If you measure the value of an investment by the returns, there is no investment money can buy that will give you the return of a scholarship."

Director of the Banff School of Fine Arts, Senator Cameron is chairman of the advisory board directing a performing arts scholarship program sponsored by the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

$15,000 SET

As its centennial contribution, Ford is offering scholarships to amateurs or professionals in the field of the performing arts. In 1964 the company gave 70 scholarships, totalling $10,000. This year it will spend $15,800 in 10 scholarships of $50 each for 14 and 15-year-olds, 65 of $100 each for 16 to 18-year-olds and 32 at $250 each for students aged 19 to 26.

Senator Cameron said in an interview that any scholarship given to young people can serve several purposes regardless of its size. It may represent the first real encouragement given a student, and it may bring the student to the attention of people in a community who can give him more help if he needs it.

"The first step on the ladder, the first recognition, is the hardest to get, and a lot of people don't appreciate this. Once you get that, it's not so hard to get money to go beyond it. Interested people can raise it.

"What happens is that Suzie, who may have been blooming unnoticed, gets a scholarship. If she is a poor youngster, often someone else will match the scholarship or raise more money. And it's a good thing, to get the community interested."

If He'd Only Kept Quiet...

AKRON, Ohio—Free for 44 years despite a first-degree murder conviction, Leroy Dunlap might well have gone free for good but for the plea he entered at his new trial.

Dunlap pleaded guilty of first-degree manslaughter.

He learns Tuesday whether he'll get one to 20 years' imprisonment or wins the probation he asks.

"I didn't have the evidence, witnesses—nothing for a first-degree murder conviction and I would have had to recommend letting the old guy go free," prosecutor James V. Barbuto said after Friday's new trial.

Dunlap, 64, a grandfather who has spent more than two-thirds of his life running from the law, was convicted in absentia of the 1920 holdup-slaying, with four accomplices, of waiter Steve Bosses in Akron.

He escaped during the trial and the jury returned a guilty verdict without a recommendation for mercy.

Last October, Dunlap was arrested at a soldiers' home in Washington, D.C., where he had been living since retirement from the air force in 1959.

Friday's trial was supposed to have been a retrial of the old murder charge. All transcripts of the original trial had been destroyed and the witnesses who could be located had hazy memories.

SAN FRANCISCO—Highway patrolman Don Weber gave a ticket for driving at a speed "unsafe for conditions" to a motorist weaving along on Skyline Blvd. at only 40 miles an hour, well below the normal speed limit. Weber said he found Iver Morris, of San Bruno, steering with his left hand while shaving with a cigarette lighter plug-in model razor.

Fighting for Survival

Vancouver Paper Pleads For Ads, Subscribers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Times says it is fighting for survival after less than seven months of publication as Vancouver's third daily newspaper.

In a front-page statement, it pleads for more subscriptions and heavier advertising.

The newspaper says it has not enough working capital to continue and "would have gone under in January" if dozens of suppliers had not voluntarily agreed to defer payment of accounts.

PEOPLE WILL DECIDE

William Val Warren, president of the paper, said in an interview that "it is up to the people of Vancouver to decide whether they want The Times to continue." He added:

"It will be up to our shareholders to decide whether the paper continues when we hold our second annual meeting April 12."

He said he was confident the decision would be to keep The Times going.

He also said that because of financial difficulties The Times was forced Friday to postpone the payday of the non-mechanical departments until next Wednesday.

The announcement says the newspaper needs $100,000 to retire immediate commitments and ensure that it can achieve a profit position by this fall. The public is asked to buy more company debentures, selling for $100 per unit and bearing 6½ per cent interest.

The newspaper's circulation, 62,000 when it entered the evening field last Sept. 5, now is 45,000.

What Is France's Purpose?

Bid for Uranium Ticklish Problem

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is facing a tough decision in the next month or two over sales of uranium.

Informants say negotiations are nearing a conclusion after many months on a bid by France to buy a huge quantity of uranium on a long-term contract.

The problem involves the government's policy of refusing to sell uranium, the raw material of nuclear weapons as well as the essential ingredient of nuclear power plants, without a guarantee that the purchaser will use it solely for peaceful purposes.

With Canadian uranium producers suffering from a low world demand for their product, the French bid is particularly attractive.

TALKING POINT

And one of the talking points in the negotiations appears to be the fact that Canada has never asked assurances from Britain or the United States, this country's biggest uranium customers in the past, that the uranium sold them is not going into nuclear weapons programs.

But purchases by Britain and the U.S. have been steadily sagging. At present, Canada sells none to the U.S. and the contract to sell to Britain, already stretched out beyond its original termination date, ends next year.

The French offer is said to involve buying 25 per cent of this country's present known uranium reserves over a 25-year period.

SEEK GUARANTEE?

The problem: Should Canada treat France any different from Britain and, in the past, the U.S., by insisting on guarantees the uranium won't be used in France's nuclear weapons program?

Prime Minister Pearson seemed to dispose of this earlier this month when he told the Commons that Canada "proposes to observe" international commitments to ensure that Canadian uranium is not used for military purposes.

However, if Canada is to export even for peaceful purposes, what controls can there be to ensure that Canadian uranium doesn't join uranium from other suppliers in the French atomic program?

And an associated question: Would purchases by France under guarantee they are for peaceful purposes free other uranium purchased elsewhere by France for the French nuclear weapons program?

And, assuming these problems can be solved, the government has to balance the attractions of a long-term contract against the expectation that within five years world demand will rise drastically as more and more nuclear power stations come into being.

About all the government is saying for the record was said in the Commons last week.

Trade Minister Sharp said the uranium policy is under consideration. And Industry Minister Drury said no export permit to ship uranium to France has been granted.

Under-Withholding Cause

U.S. Income Tax Bite Leaving Teeth Marks

By DREN COOPER

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. income tax is biting so hard this year you can see the marks.

Some banks are reporting an unusually large number of personal loans. The reason: Money needed to pay taxes.

The internal revenue service has noticed a significant slowdown in the flow of tax returns. The reason: More people than usual are waiting until the last minute—April 15—because they have to send money in.

A lot of families which are used to getting refunds in the spring haven't got any this year. The reason: The same one that is behind most of this year's more than usual tax distress—last year's under-withholding.

And yet, ironically, a larger percentage of those taxpayers who have filed their returns are making errors in favor of the government.

When pay-cheque deductions were reduced in March, 1964, to 14 per cent from 18 following enactment of an $11,500,000,000 tax cut, the largest in history, Johnson administration officials recognized that some taxpayers who earn from $7,500 to $20,000 wouldn't be fully covered by withholding.

The withholding rate was set a little low to pour more money in the spending stream and thereby pep up the economy. Economists almost unanimously agree that the strategy worked, but it put a crimp in the personal financial strategy of many taxpayers.

Many taxpayers did not take advantage of their option to permit larger deductions from their pay-cheques.

As of March 19, the revenue service had mailed out 16,300,000 refunds compared to 18,800,000 at a comparable point last year, a decline of 14 per cent.

Refunds totalled about $1,900,000,000, a drop of 25 per cent from last year.

George Paulin

City Travel Agency Has New Owner

Boyle

Ownership of Victoria's oldest travel agency has changed hands with the sale of George Paulin Travel Service to John E. Boyle, who has been with the company for the past six years.

The company was formed in 1939 as a travel agency and as a shipping and customs office by Lt.-Col. George Paulin, well-known city business man, who has been with the company until he sold it earlier this month.

NO POLICY CHANGE

"There will be no change in the policy, management or personnel as a result of the change of ownership," said Mr. Boyle. "I am proud to have taken over a firm with a long service personnel."

Mr. Boyle came to Victoria from Stratford-on-Avon in England and shortly after arrival married a daughter of Brigadier Fred Cabeldu.

He immediately joined the firm of George Paulin and has worked for them in the shipping, customs and travel sections.

MARSHALL REMAINS

Continuing as manager is Eric Marshall, who has had 45 years of travel experience and was Victoria's first airline agent when in 1922 he founded the Olde Country Booking Office.

George Costello, who was formerly CPR steamship agent in the Orient and Miss Muriel Campbell are other long service members of the company.

Lt.-Col. Paulin is a former director of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and for many years was president of the Black Ball Ferry Company of Canada when it provided a regular passenger service between Victoria and Port Angeles and Seattle.

May Go Alone

Brotherhood At Odds With Union

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Native Brotherhood of B.C. has warned it may end joint fish negotiations with the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (Ind.).

Guy Williams, president of the brotherhood, told the union his group would go it alone if differences with the union could not be settled.

He said the differences include a demand for participation in the union's salmon welfare fund and a claim for damages.

He said the damage was caused last year to a boat owned by a member of the brotherhood and the union had refused to pay a $150 claim.

Union secretary Homer Stevens said the problems would have to be worked out by the executive of the two groups.

For Centenary

'Buy Canadian' Best Gift

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians could give themselves a Confederation birthday present of 100,000 additional jobs a year if they could be sold on an effective "buy Canadian" program, George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, said Saturday.

Addressing a conference of Rotary Clubs of southern Ontario, Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges, said:

"It can be done if we are willing to make a determined and planned effort to do it. It seems to me that such an effort would be about the best birthday present we could give our country and our fellow Canadians when we celebrate our 100th birthday, July 1, 1967."

Mr. Hees cited an example set by Northern Electric Company Limited, which has decided to buy Canadian-made components when possible.

Of 10,000 parts imported in 1962, about 92 per cent were ordered from Canadian manufacturers.

Canada thus saved $15,000,000 annually in foreign exchange because of the company's policy and 2,500 new jobs were created. The company profited, too.

Mac-Powell Paves Way For Alberta Pulp Mill

He said it is expected the transfer will take place by April 1. Alberta has only one pulp mill, at Hinton, 175 miles west of Edmonton. It is operated by Northwest Pulp and Paper Company.

Industrial Symposium

Professor Seeks Link For Campus—Industry

A lack of communication between industrial scientists and university scientists prompted an Industrial Symposium at the University of Victoria, chemistry department head Prof. L. J. Clark said Friday.

The symposium was held at the university Thursday and Friday.

"Industrial research is done for profit while research is the search for truth and has not the slightest concern for profit," he said.

Prof. Clark felt that the two fields were complimentary and organized the symposium to "see if we couldn't explore a means of communication and set up study groups to look into the future for 'inter-action' between the two groups."

"Europe is well ahead in this field," Prof. Clark said. "The universities of Zurich and Milan award Ph.D degrees in industrial chemistry—unheard of in this country."

Prof. Clark explained that European chemists had the advantage of doing post-doctorate work in poly-technical schools for a year before entering industry.

"They have a meeting of the minds between industry and universities and this is lacking in Canada," he added.

Taking part in the symposium were Dr. R. C. Bell, director of technical research with Consolidated Mining and Smelting; H. E. Lloyd, technical adviser of newsprint with MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River; R. D. Jolly, supervisor of technical services with Standard Oil.

Also taking part were: Dr. S. A. Ryce, Dr. N. S. Isaacs, Dr. K. C. Moss and Prof. D. J. MacLaurin, all of the University of Victoria; P. R. Day, economic development scientist with CIL; Dr. K. U. Ingold, physical chemist with the National Research Council and Dr. H. R. Streight, university liaison officer with Du Pont.

Leafs Capture Playoff Spot

By JIM TANG

Victoria's unpredictable Maple Leafs not only won themselves a spot in the Western Hockey League playoffs by dumping Vancouver Canucks, 5-3, at Memorial Arena last night but they earned a chance to finish third when they end their scheduled season in Vancouver this afternoon.

Victory for the Leafs this afternoon would leave the two clubs with 68 points each. In that event, the higher position will be awarded to the club with the most victories and—it sort of sneaked up on everyone—the Leafs already have won 32 games to 31 for the Canucks.

On the result of the game will hang the decision on semi-final opponents. The third-place club gets the league-champion Portland Buckaroos and the fourth-place club tangles with the second-place Seattle Totems in the other best-of-seven set.

Left out of things by last night's development at Memorial Arena were the playoff champions of last season, San Francisco Seals. They did what they could by winning their last two games but it was too little too late.

Victoria coach Rudy Pilous, bothered and bewildered as he sweated out the last weeks of the season, had his Mr. Hydes out for the 4,144 fans who showed up to lend their support.

The Leafs who just couldn't find their skating legs in Seattle on Friday night in getting outplayed by the Totems, were hard to find. Instead, Pilous had, as he has had when it really counted, a determined, hard-skating crew which clearly earned the points in what was the clutch game of the season.

Had the Leafs lost, they would have had to gain at least one point in Vancouver today to avoid a special playoff with the Seals for fourth place. And it is quite common knowledge that Victoria has lost seven out of seven there this season.

Los Angeles	70	[illegible]	41	[illegible]	217	[illegible]	[illegible]

Last night's scores: Vancouver 3 at VICTORIA 5; Portland 4 at Seattle 2; San Francisco 4 at Los Angeles 2.

Final games: today—VICTORIA at Vancouver; Seattle at Portland.

Leafs made certain of avoiding it by winning their sixth in a row over Canucks on Memorial Arena ice, and they did it rather impressively after being set back after only 30 seconds by Canucks' first goal.

PERFECT PLAY

It was, naturally, set up by Billy McNeill, who got a sudden break at centre ice and made the perfect play as his wingers came up fast on either side, Howie Hughes drilling one past Al Millar.

Claude Labrosse got it back two minutes later with a slap shot from just inside the blueline after Milan Marcetta had won a draw in the Vancouver end.

Except for getting a bit careless when they got themselves two three-goal leads in the first period, the Leafs were in command from there.

They were moving the puck, forcing the play and booming shots at Gilles Villemure. Their forcing tactics brought Vancouver penalties, which in turn brought them their next two goals, and their hard shooting three times caused the game to be stopped while Villemure got minor repairs.

ROOKIE PLAYS

The third time, Villemure had to leave with what was reported to be strained knee ligaments and rookie Barry Brown, with the New Westminster junior Royals last season and the previous season, played the last 16 minutes and 44 seconds.

Fred Hucul, who had another of his good games, tied it up with a smoking point shot while Canucks played two men short near the end of the first period. And it was Hucul's iced shot which Danny Belisle turned in for the 3-1 goal in the second period with Larry Cahan serving time for some centre-ice slashing.

NINTH SCORE

It was Belisle's ninth goal against his ex-teammates this season.

It was still 3-1 when Villemure left the game, and it took more than three minutes before Leafs could test Brown.

Lou Jankowski got the first chance, hooking the puck backhanded during a mix-up about 15 feet in front of the Vancouver goal to leave Brown no chance.

That should have been enough but Cahan's point shot just over a minute later deflected off Buddy Boone's skates for a lucky goal and there was cause for worry when Steve Witiuk got a penalty.

But Larry Keenan and Gordie Redahl, forechecking in the Vancouver zone, got the puck away from Dunc McCallum and Redahl fired it in to restore the three-goal margin. Boone got one back when the Leafs got careless about their checking but they tightened up again to look safe the rest of the distance.

League champion Portland Buckaroos defeated Seattle Totems, 4-2, in another game, with Seattle's Guyle Fielder scoring a pair of goals and taking over the individual point-getting lead from Portland's Art Jones, 89-88.

Crozier Close to Vezina Trophy Win

National Hockey League champion Detroit Red Wings provided their goalkeeper, rookie Roger Crozier, with a good grip on the Vezina Trophy as they bombed Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1, before 14,703 Toronto fans last night.

Result gives Crozier a two-goal lead over the Toronto duo of Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk and the Chicago twosome of Glenn Hall and Denis DeJordy in the battle for the trophy, awarded annually to the goalkeeper playing the most games for the team allowing the fewest goals during the regular season.

Possession of the trophy will be settled tonight as the season ends. Wings play host to the Maple Leafs in Detroit while Chicago visits Boston to play the last-place Bruins, who whomped Montreal Canadiens, 6-2, in another game last night.

Crozier has allowed 171 goals in 69 games while the Toronto and Chicago combinations have each allowed 173 in the same number of games.

Leafs afforded Bower little protection throughout the game and the veteran came up with a stro performance to limit the fast-stepping Wings to four goals.

Pit Martin, Eddie Joyal and Paul Henderson each contributed his eighth goal of the season for Winds while Normie Ullman bagged his 42nd, tops in the league.

Ullman now has 83 points, four fewer than Chicago's Stan Mikita, the league's top point-getter.

Ron Ellis, Crozier's main competition in the voting for the Calder Trophy, awarded annually to the league's top rookie, scored the only Toronto goal, his 23rd of the season.

Last night's scores: Detroit 4 at Toronto 1; Boston 6 at Montreal 2.

Next games: tonight—Toronto at Detroit; Montreal at New York; Chicago at Boston.

FINE EFFORT

At Montreal, Bruins' goalkeeper Jack Norris turned in an exceptional effort as Boston gained only its third win of the season against Canadiens. Montreal won 10 games and tied another.

Norris wound up with 33 saves, at least a third of them fine efforts, as Bruins won their first game in seven Montreal visits.

A Forum crowd of 14,234 at times jeered Canadiens for their inept play in the second period but it amounted to a nothing game for both teams.

Montreal coach Toe Blake, using the game to experiment, split the game equally between his two goalies, Charlie Hodge and Lorne "Gump" Worsley. Each gave up three goals.

Boston scoring was shared by Don Awrey, Ted Green, Tom Williams, Wayne Maxner, Johnny Bucyk and Orland Kurtenbach while Jean Beliveau and Henri Richard scored for Canadiens.

Rangers and Hotspur will play a sudden-death game for the championship next Saturday.

Vikettes Head for Montreal For Canadian Cage Series

Victory earned Vikettes a trip to Montreal during Easter week for the Canadian final, April 19, 20 and 21, against one Quebec and two Ontario teams.

Mrs. Coutts hit for 10 field goals and seven free throws last night while Sylvia Campbell dropped in nine points for the champs.

Big Victory For Lakers

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Nearly everyone got a try as Shawnigan Lake walked over University School 29-6 in the Independent Schools Rugby League here yesterday, increasing their winning streak to 10 games.

Dennis Maguire led Shawnigan scoring with a penalty kick, a try and four converts, closely followed by Gordon Mackenzie with two trys.

Hockey Win To McLarens

Lone scorer for Norsemen yesterday was Larry Reid.

Junior Lessons

Golf School Switched

The venue of the Victoria District junior golf school to take place during the Easter holidays has been changed from Gorge Vale Golf Club to Douglas Golflands.

The change was recommended by the local golf professional committee which will give the lessons.

Joe Pryke, chairman of the pros committee, and professional at Gorge Vale said that his committee had decided that the Golflands provided wider facilities for running a series of golf lessons for a large number of young people than existed at Gorge.

"There are fine facilities at Golfland," said Mr. Pryke, "And in addition there will be an ample supply of golf balls available for practice . . ."

Mr. Pryke added that in addition to providing many teeing grounds, Golflands had a par three golf course which would be used by the teaching staff for instruction in short iron play and putting.

In view of the recommendation of the professionals, the Victoria District Committee agreed to make the change.

Golflands is within easy reach of B.C. Hydro's Carey (No. 19) bus service.

Only a limited number of applications can be taken, and young golfers should take advantage of the application form in today's issue if they wish to take part.

There is a registration fee of $2 and the school will be in session on April 20, 21 and 22 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Boys and girls, over 12 and under 19 are eligible. The course is aimed to provide a beginners' introduction to golf and the basic principles of swinging and hitting the ball.

Twin Double Pays $125,000

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The longest-priced horse in the race, Ampose ($38.40), scored a startling upset in the $111,900 Gulfstream Handicap Saturday, and two New Jersey brothers held a twin double ticket on him worth $124,972.

It was the single most valuable ticket ever bought at an American thoroughbred track.

Another longshot, Tronado, finished second while the favored Gun Bow was third and the once-great Candy Spots was dead last by five lengths.

"Give me a receipt."

They wouldn't talk about their betting methods although a friend described them as heavy bettors.

Besides Ampose, the other long shots they picked were: Tim's Lady, $78.00, in the fifth, Chairmans Choice, $16.40, in the sixth and Dummy, $30.40, in the eighth.

In the Gulfstream Handicap, Babington, an entry with Tronado, was fourth followed by Hot Dust, Your Alibhai, Lt. Stevens and Candy Spots.

Liverpool In Final

LONDON (Reuters)—Liverpool, last season's English League soccer champion, took a big stride toward an ambitious cup double when it beat Chelsea 2-0 Saturday to reach the final of the English Football Association Cup competition.

Liverpool, which reached the semi-finals of the European Cup Wednesday on the toss of a coin after five hours of soccer against FC Cologne of West Germany had failed to produce a result, will not know its English Cup final opponent until Wednesday. Manchester United and Leeds played a scoreless draw Saturday and meet again at Nottingham Forest's ground Wednesday.

SCOTS TOO

A similar situation exists in the Scottish Cup competition. Dunfermline beat Hibernian 2-0 to reach the final but the other semi - finalists, Celtic and Motherwell, drew 2-2 and will have to replay.

Liverpool's crushing victory ended Chelsea's hopes of achieving a treble of English Cup, league championship and league cup. The two second-half goals also upset the forecasters who predicted a classic final between Chelsea and Manchester United—especially after Liverpool had travelled to Holland Wednesday to play a gruelling two-hour match against Cologne in Rotterdam.

But Liverpool showed no signs of tiredness Saturday and its strong, unyielding and experienced team-play overcame the fast, youthful and thrustful soccer of Chelsea on the neutral ground of Aston Villa.

SCORE PENALTY SHOT

The all-important goals were scored by left - winger Peter Thompson, in the 62nd minute, and left-half Willie Stevenson, who netted from the penalty spot in the 79th minute after Ian St. John had been brought down.

Leeds and Manchester United tangled in a robust match at Hillsborough, Sheffield, but it did not come up to expectations. The soft, lumpy ground conditions were unsuitable for Manchester and Leeds was a little unlucky not to win.

Leeds, unbeaten now in 21 consecutive matches, is bidding to reach the final for the first time in its history. Manchester United, however, has appeared in five finals and has won the cup three times.

It will be Liverpool's third final. It was beaten on the two previous occasions, by Burnley in 1914 and by Arsenal in 1950.

Automatic Racer Wins at Sebring

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Jim Hall, wealthy young Texas oilman who races sports cars for fun, brought his speedy Chaparral through heat and rain, through daylight and darkness to a surprise victory in the Sebring 12-hour endurance race Saturday.

Hall and Hap Sharp, his fellow businessman in oil well drilling as well as driving, were in first or second place all the way in their pure white machine with unorthodox appearance and unprecedented automatic transmission.

They put an end to the reign of Ferrari, which could do no better than third place after winning here the last four years in a row.

The winners covered 197 laps unofficially and averaged 84.723 miles an hour.

FASTEST CAR

Because of a violent rainstorm, the record of 214 laps and 92.364 mph held up. Mike Parkes and Umberto Maglioli set it in a factory Ferrari.

There was no question the Hall-Sharp Chaparral was the fastest in the field of 67 cars which started. Its big Chevrolet engine, with a set of exhausts behind the driver looking like a pipe organ, turned it around the flat 5.2-mile airport course in record-breaking laps. Only an hour-long deluge of rain prevented it from a full race record.

Sharp had the honor of driving the record lap in two minutes, 59 seconds—a speed of 104.58 miles an hour. It erased the 3:06.2 and 100.539 mph record set by John Surtees in a Ferrari last year.

THEY WERE WRONG

Yet Sebring veterans said the Chaparral was a fine sprint car but wouldn't hold up for 12 hours of pounding on the abrasive concrete and asphalt surface. They said its automatic transmission would put too much strain on the brakes at the sharp turns.

They were wrong. Hall was right when he said the automatic transmission, an innovation in road racing, would free the driver's hands for better control and more speed in the corners.

A Ford GT prototype which won the Daytona continental race at 2,000 kilometres (1,243 miles) only a month ago, finished second.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Herring seiners netting right square on top of major grilse and adult coho and spring salmon migration routes and feeding grounds, day after day and year after year, are causing the destruction of specific salmon races.

This is the opinion conservationist Howard English expressed to the annual meeting of the Amalgamated Conservation Society.

The ACS has compiled a brief on the herring seining problem related to salmon stocks and will forward it immediately to Pacific Fisheries Director Rod Hourston and then to member-clubs, federal and provincial government officials and other interested persons. The brief will be given the widest possible publicity and will undoubtedly be a major topic at the next sports salmon fishing advisory committee meeting scheduled for Vancouver April 28 and B.C. Federation of Fish and Game Clubs convention April 29.

A second and more technical brief on herring fishing and grilse taken in herring seines is now under preparation.

The most massive single problem facing the sports and commercial salmon fishery is the drastic decline of formerly large populations of grilse and adult coho and spring salmon in many major sport fishing waters, English told ACS delegates.

He said that in many locations there is less than 10 per cent of the salmon population, compared to 10 years ago.

He cites Sidney Spit and East Point as major areas affected and said from Campbell River south and around to Barkley Sound indiscriminate netting appears to be effecting a systematic destruction of very important salmon races.

English said separate salmon races seem to be the key to the problem. He admitted there have been good escapements to salmon spawning rivers, but thought that the good escapements are fall coho. The decline is in the separate races of summer coho and springs.

Summer coho arrive on their inside feeding grounds from Nanaimo to Victoria in July and August and weigh five to eight pounds. The fall coho run through Juan de Fuca Strait in September and weigh 12 to 20 pounds.

He said studies indicate herring seiners are taking more grilse than the sports fishery in the Campbell River, Nanaimo and Sidney areas.

The most devastating effect of the herring fishery catch of salmon is in its accumulative decline effect on the specific races of salmon affected, he said.

This catch is made largely from specific races of salmon, so it is relevant only to these races, which are at a very low ebb, English explained. "This catch is an additional catch to that taken by the salmon industry. It appears in fact to be overkill," he charged.

The herring fishery's salmon catch appears to have tipped the delicate balance between growth and decline of summer coho and springs, toward decline, he said.

The herring fishery is supposed to be netting herring. It should not take a single salmon. It is not a legitimate salmon fishery. Yet the herring fishery seines right on major salmon concentrations, which the legitimate salmon fishery is not permitted to fish.

He said half to one pound grilse taken in herring seines are worth one half to one cent in herring meal at $20 a ton. One year later approximately half the grilse as seven-pound coho at more than 26 cents a pound would be worth $1.80. The balance of the grilse two to three years later as 12-pound springs at nearly 40 cents a pound would be worth $4.80 each.

English told how sports fishing for grilse had been cut to more than 12 inches and will be cut again June 1 to four fish, from eight. The commercial troll fleet will have its catch of immature salmon cut in the fall of 1965. Vast sums are going into spawning channels and developments to produce grilse.

The great potential value of this conservation and production development program is being largely destroyed by the herring seiners turning a large share of these salmon into herring meal, English charged.

The legitimate salmon fishery is being forced to reduce its catch to try and compensate for the extensive damage being done to salmon stocks by the herring fishery's illegitimate salmon kill, he claimed. Herring netting on major grilse and salmon feeding grounds and migration routes is a major failure in the salmon conservation program, he said.

"When is the herring fishery going to be effectively regulated, to adequately contribute to salmon conservation?" he asked.

English, a member of the salmon sports fishing advisory council, will undoubtedly receive considerable support for his beliefs. Our inside information is that herring seiners themselves are seriously concerned about the problem and will be receptive to control measures. After all, most of them are also salmon fishermen.

Many Chances But One Goal As United Beats UBC Birds

By ROBIN JEFFREY

If Victoria United had picked up a nickel for every chance it missed in its Pacific Coast Soccer League match with UBC yesterday, the Victoria players would be fishing from their private yachts off the coast of Florida this morning.

Actually it wasn't quite that bad, but United, playing well until it got near goal, frittered away at least a dozen first-class opportunities and had to settle for a 1-0 victory on Ced Robb's early goal.

As 500 frustrated fans at Royal Athletic Park gasped and groaned, United headed off the bar, over the bar, miskicked and shot by the post.

Solid midfield and defensive play broke down at the UBC goal. Once inside the Thunderbird penalty area United couldn't kick a dent in a pound of butter.

But the win kept United close to the league-leaders as Vancouver Firefighters were held to a 0-0 draw by New Westminster Royals. United, however, has played two more games than Vancouver Canadians and one more than the Firefighters.

Going with a strong wind in the first half, United gave outside-right Bert Soutar plenty of the ball. And Soutar, probably the best of the Victoria forwards, sent in a series of pin-point crosses.

But the goals just wouldn't come.

Robb's winner at 18 minutes of the first half was a fine example of perseverance, but United could have scored five or six "better" goals.

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts.
Firefighters ...	17	10	3	4	31	17	24
Canadians ...	16	9	2	5	34	15	23
VICTORIA ...	16	9	3	4	34	25	22
Columbus ...	16	7	6	3	29	26	17
N. Westminster	18	6	8	4	22	26	17
North Shore ...	16	4	9	3	18	26	11
UBC ...	19	3	15	1	16	44	7

Yesterday's scores: UBC 0 at VICTORIA 1; Firefighters 0, New Westminster 0.

Next game: [illegible]—[illegible] Cup, Columbus vs. Canadians.

Soutar dropped a corner into the goalmouth which goalie George Hrennikoff seemed to have. But Hrennikoff held the ball too far in front of him and Robb bundled it into the goal.

With two minutes left in the half Robb charged Hrennikoff and the ball into the net, but referee George Steele disallowed the goal after consultation with linesman Jack Adams.

After the interval United followed the same pattern with good approach work collapsing in poor finishing.

Speedy UBC centre-forward Jim Berry was the Thunderbirds' big threat as he shot by the post in each half after beating the Victoria backs.

Juniors Oscar Valdal and Joe Milligan both saw action for United in the second half, Valdal at wing-half and Milligan at inside forward. Both looked cool and competent, Milligan dropping three dangerous crosses into the UBC goalmouth.

United's next game is in Victoria Saturday against North Shore.

UBC — George Hrennikoff; Sandy Beveridge, Noel Cumming; David Chapman, Ed Wasylik, Keith Commons; Dick Mosher, Joe Alexis, Jim Berry, Harvey Thom, Paul Beckon. Reserves: Rob Pennyway, Phil Brown, Joe Johnson.

VICTORIA — Larry DeCosta; Dave Stothard, Tony Quinn; Peter Gooding, Bill Hamilton, Harold Hoiroyd; Bert Soutar, Ash Valdal, Ced Robb, Russ Ball, Dunc McCaig. Reserves: Oscar Valdal, Joe Milligan, Jim Jamieson, George Paul.

In Grand National

All-American Result

AINTREE, England (AP)—Tommy Smith rode Jay Trump to a narrow victory in a thrilling Grand National Saturday and made racing history.

For the first time in 128 years the fearsome steeplechase was won by a horse bred in the United States, owned by an American and ridden by one.

Smith, of Middleburg, Va., fought it out neck-and-neck with Scottish-trained Freddie, the 7-to-2 favorite, over the last few hundred yards. He won by three-fourths of a length.

Mr. Jones was third 20 lengths behind. Rainbow Battle was fourth. Each was a 50-to-1 shot.

All 47 horses named for the race Friday started in brilliant sunshine, with only 14 horses finishing. Five riders were taken to hospitals with injuries suffered in falls.

WATCHED BY ROYALTY

The Queen Mother and Princess Margaret were in the huge throng of 20,000. The Queen Mother's The Rip was one of the favorites and was a challenger for the first time around the Aintree course. The Rip finished seventh.

This may be the last Grand National over the famed layout that measures four miles, 856 yards and has 30 obstacles. The owner wants to sell it for a housing development.

BIG KISS

Jay Trump's owner, Mrs. Mary Stephenson of Cincinnati, Ohio, greeted Smith with a big kiss in the unsaddling enclosure. The win brought her a first prize of £22,041 ($66,000). Jay Trump was 100-to-6 in the betting.

The second-prize purse was £2,508 (about $7,500) and third prize was £1,329 (about $3,950).

Jay Trump, twice winner of the Maryland Hunt cup in the United States, was timed in 9:30.6.

It was the second straight victory for an American-owned horse in the National, which was run for the 124th time since 1837. Last year's winner was Team Spirit.

The victory was the sixth by an American-owned horse in the long history of the world's most famous steeplechase.

It was a great day, too, for holders of tickets on Jay Trump in the Irish sweepstakes and those who coupled him with Old Tom, winner of the Lincoln Handicap, in the spring double betting. Holders of sweepstakes tickets on the winner receive $140,000. Second place tickets are good for $56,000 and third place $28,000.

Smith, 27, managed to avoid trouble through most of the course but he had a couple of frightening moments. Jay Trump landed on a fallen rider at one obstacle and he had to skip over a fallen horse at the next-to-last fence.

Oak Bay Council

Dance Fee Defended

Dancing schools are not overcharged, says Oak Bay municipal officials who grant licences to such schools.

School operators recently complained their licence fee is the same as for private schools, but an investigating committee decided the fee is small compared to the number of students. Council accepted a recommendation against any fee change.

Pro and con arguments over a request for rezoning of property for an additional classroom at Glenlyon school, 1720 Beach Drive, will be given final hearing at the next meeting of council.

A motorist who took out a stop sign during a December snowstorm has refused to pay a $27.60 bill. But officials say a number of similar accounts have been paid without question and the bill will stand.

A local improvement proposal to spend $1,800 on a sidewalk at Cranmore Road failed to get necessary support but the work will be done anyway. Following a report from the police chief, council decided to complete the work out of general revenue.

Couple Injured In Collision

Driver of the other car was Walter Yeamans, 1757 Richardson.

Ex-Cabinet Minister

U.K. Baroness To Speak At Playhouse

By IAN ARROL

One of Britain's best known and most charming feminists, Baroness Summerskill of Ken Wood, will address a public meeting at 8 p.m. June 14 in McPherson Playhouse.

Summerskill

As Dr. Edith Summerskill, she was a former chairman of the British Labor Party and was a cabinet minister in the 1945-51 Attlee Labor government.

The baroness also will be keynote speaker at the national convention of the World Federalists of Canada, June 12 and 13, at the Empress Hotel.

U.S. MEETING

In announcing speaker and dates for the convention, Professor C. S. Burchill of Royal Roads, WFC national president, said the Canadian meeting would precede by one week a World Federalist convention in San Francisco.

"A large European and Asiatic representation is expected at San Francisco with 70 to 80 delegates from Japan alone.

"We will be meeting in the city where 20 years ago the United Nations charter was negotiated and adopted.

CRISIS CITED

"The events of the past year in particular—the crisis over peace-keeping payments and the withdrawal of Indonesia—have demonstrated the urgent need of the revision of the UN Charter and th clarification and enlargement of its functions."

Membership in the Victoria and Island branch of the WFC is now 254. The association also has an advisory board whose members include Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor, president of the University of Victoria; Rear-Admiral E. W. Finch-Noyes, RCN (retired) and Roderick L. Haig-Brown, author and naturalist of Campbell River.

"The general purpose of the WFC is to strengthen the UN and make it an effective instrument of enforceable world law," said Prof. Burchill.

On May 22, 1865, a fisherman named Portuguese Joe took a ton of sturgeon from the Fraser River in one evening, the largest weighing 400 pounds. Using one net and a helper he also brought in 19 salmon weighing 30 to 35 pounds each.

C.M.I. steals the show at the sportsmen's show

This year's Sportsmen's show has many attractions, but the new Toyota and Isuzu cars from Canadian Motor Industries up-staged them all. People don't expect to see really new cars at the Sportsmen's Show, so CMI took them by surprise with the most surprisingly new cars in Canada. The line-up of scene-stealers included the beautifully appointed 6-passenger Toyota Crown in both sedan and station wagon editions—the Toyota 700 (Canada's lowest priced car with automatic transmission)—and the sporty Isuzu Bellett (now there's a car to bring out the sportsman in anyone). CMI will be stealing the show in your town any day now—watch your newspaper for dealer openings in your area.

A word of warning: CMI cars don't stop at stealing shows, they steal hearts and loyalties.

Ex-Minister Disapproves Of Radical Thinker Ban

Pickersgill

Canada should not deny visitors entry because they are radical thinkers, federal transport minister J. W. Pickersgill said in Victoria Saturday.

Mr. Pickersgill, in Victoria visiting relatives, said Canada should drop its vigilance against the entry of radical thinkers into the country as visitors.

CONTROVERSIAL

But the former immigration minister said changing the Immigration Act is difficult, because of the act's controversial nature.

He was commenting on the visit of American professor Mulford Q. Sibley, who was denied entry to Canada at Winnipeg for a speaking engagement earlier this week.

Immigration minister John Nicholson said Friday he will allow Sibley to enter the country to fulfil his engagement.

Earlier this week, Mr. Nicholson said though he disagreed with certain sections of the Immigration Act, his department officials had no choice but to bar the professor.

Before retiring he owned restaurants and a store on Johnson.

Two men who pleaded guilty Saturday to impaired driving were each fined $350 in city magistarte's court and restricted to business driving for three months.

They were James McKay, 3856 Carey, and Dennis Conibear, 565 Obed.

McKay was stopped by police Friday afternoon after his car was seen weaving on West Saanich Road. There were schoolchildren on both sides of the road at the time, Magistrate Harold Alder was told.

McKay was taken to city police station and given a breathalyzer test, which showed a blood alcohol content of .28 per cent.

Conibear was stopped early Saturday on Esquimalt Road after police followed him across Johnson Street Bridge. His breath smelled strongly of alcohol, and in both police and medical opinion his ability to drive was impaired.

Sometimes Goods For Bills

Not all those bills received for goods that are not received are wrong, according to the Vancouver Island Better Business Bureau.

Recent research into complaints of people who claim they have been unfairly billed has received good response from the shippers.

Persons who had bills for books, magazines and pills, to name a few, in informing the BBB have had their complaints looked into promptly. If there was an error the bureau saw to it that the error was set straight—but there have been some funny twists.

In one case a housewife complained she was being billed for a magazine she didn't want and hadn't ordered. It turned out her 11-year-old son was responsible.

University Symposium Told

'Second-Rate' Image Keeps Scientists from Industry

Some university professors believe second-rate scientists end up in industry, Dr. H. R. Streight told an industrial symposium at the University of Victoria.

University liaison officer with Du Pont of Canada, Dr. Streight said that, with this attitude on the part of some professors, industry could not expect the good students "to be flocking for interviews."

"This is unfortunate because industry doesn't want the mediocre candidates any more than the university does."

Dr. Streight said a shortage of highly skilled scientists was one of the main difficulties in research and development activities in private industry.

A considerable number of companies in Canada, Du Pont included, have vacancies of long standing for capable research and development personnel."

SPENDING RISES

"I think you could walk into almost any department of chemistry or engineering today and find they are not going to obtain the required number of graduate Canadian students needed in 1965."

Dr. Streight felt that Canadian industry was research conscious.

He said over-all research and development spending in Canada had been increasing at a rate of 7.8 per cent annually but research and development financed by industry during the same period had been growing at a rate of 10.3 per cent.

Placements Selectifs Inc. pleaded guilty and was fined $6,000. Nine of the salesmen pleaded guilty and were fined $500 while three pleaded not guilty. They will be tried soon.

Historic Homes Have Month's Life Left

By JAMES K. NESBITT

Two of the fine homes of olden Victoria will be no more this time next month, demolished to make way for the government's new museum-archives wing to the legislative buildings.

Stonehaven, next to the Douglas Building, is the last private residence of Elliott Street, where once Dr. John Sebastion Helmcken lived.

In due course Elliott Street will disappear. It was put through about 1903 and named for 1876-78 B.C. Premier A. C. Elliott, whose daughter married Sir James Douglas' son.

Across Elliott Street from Stonehaven is the grey-painted wooden house designed in 1904 by architect Samuel McClure for well-to-do merchant Gustave Michaelis, whose daughters live in Victoria today — Mrs. George Hall, Mrs. M. L. FitzGerald and Mrs. Frank Bastedo, recently chatelaine of Government House in Regina.

About 1930 the government bought this house, as part of Provincial Police headquarters. It then stood next to Stonehaven, but in 1950, to make room for the Douglas Building, was moved across the street, and until now has been a Game Branch office.

Stonehaven, a magnificent house of stone, stained and bevelled glass, frescoed ceilings, with a tower looking to the Inner Harbor and the Malahat hills, was built in 1905 by, and lived in by, contractor George R. Snider, who later moved to Vancouver, there becoming a prominent builder, chief among his works being the Courthouse.

Stately Stonehaven As It Is Today

Mr. Snider was born here in 1872 to Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Snider who had 11 children. This Snider, under Governor James Douglas, was road commissioner of Vancouver Island in the early-1860's.

His wife was Emma Cheeseman, whose parents came to Victoria, around Cape Horn, in 1853, in the sailing vessel Norman Morison. Four days after they landed Emma was born.

In 1910, Stonehaven was the home of John W. Morris, of the local real estate firm of Morris and Burdick.

The following year it was purchased by George Henry Aylard, a U.S. citizen who reached B.C. in 1894, becoming prominent in Kootenay mining, and retiring here, where he died in 1932.

Until now, Stonehaven has been the home of his daughters, Misses Aileen and Muriel Aylard, who have superbly maintained it, with an eye on its history, the garden being a special feature.

From their old-world mansion, almost in downtown Victoria, and with its high, frescoed ceilings, carved newel posts and staircases, fireplace inglenooks and love seats, they are moving to a modern seafront high-rise, and that part of dear old James Bay can never be the same without them.

Ruble-Rich Solve Housing Problems

MOSCOW (LAT)—The financial elite in Moscow are now "buying" solutions to their housing problems.

A significant portion of the new apartments under construction here have been sold to Soviet families by the government as "co-operative housing."

PROHIBITIVE

The purchase price is prohibitive for the average family. The down payment on the average new co-operative apartment amounts to more than one year's income for a typical family of a factory worker with a working wife.

Co-operative housing is being promoted by the Soviet government because it relieves the government budget of some of the costs of housing construction. Housing co-operatives helped finance about 6 per cent of the new apartments that were built in the Soviet Union last year. The percentage will be higher this year.

In Moscow, cultural centre of the Soviet Union, many artists and writers enjoy relatively high incomes and they have provided a big market for co-operatives.

Sixteen per cent of the new apartment space being built in Moscow this year already has been "purchased" by the tenants. Last year the figure was 13 per cent. In 1963 it was only 6 per cent.

Home Improvement Sharpies

Glib Salesmen Trick Unwary Householders

By JIM BRAHAN

—Jim Brahan

This load of rubbish was delivered recently as "clean, black topsoil."

Home improvement sharpies are on the prowl throughout Vancouver Island.

According to William Tindall, manager of the Vancouver Island Better Business Bureau, his office is receiving complaints daily from homeowners who have been taken in by fast-talking "fly-by-nighters."

The complainants charge that sub-soil is being sold as top soil; sub-standard aluminum doors are being sold as first-class merchandise, and in some cases they are not being delivered after payments have been made; top prices are being charged for inferior stucco house siding; and some asphalt driveways after being installed collapse within weeks.

FULL OF RUBBLE

Mrs. E. Walker, 31 Midwood Road, this month purchased six yards of "topsoil," offered as "clean, black topsoil for new lawns, shrubs, flower beds, etc."

"After the soil was delivered we found it to be full of broken tile, sods, clay, chunks of wood, and literally filled with rocks and small stones," she said.

"It did not look too bad when it was first dumped, because it had been delivered soaking wet, which gave it a black appearance," said Mrs. Walker.

"But after it had a chance to dry out it was a different story," she said. "I picked out 19 dishpans full of gravel from the stuff—this is the worst case of misrepresentation I have ever seen."

CONCRETE, TOO

Another family ordered three yards of the same "topsoil" and, like Mrs. Walker, found it unusable due to its high content of miscellaneous items—but, as an added bonus their load contained a slab of broken concrete weighing approximately 150 pounds.

"Never accept any delivery after dark," Mr. Tindall warned. "Always pay by cheque, when you have viewed the soil after it has been dumped. Insist on a receipt on which the company's name is plainly printed—and be suspicious of any soil delivered in a sopping wet state."

INVESTIGATE FIRST

The hard-sell salesman, who insists on buyers making up their minds instantly or they will lose out on a money-saving deal should be thoroughly investigated by a prospective purchaser before any contract is signed, the bureau recommends.

According to the bureau, a homeowner in Sooke claimed he had been approached by a salesman of stucco siding who intimated he represented a Vancouver firm.

His price to do the Sooke home was originally quoted as $3,700. After bargaining the price was dropped to $2,500. From there it was lowered to $1,800. And before the owner chased the salesman from the property the price had sunk to $1,200.

According to Mr. Tindall, a Brentwood family had their home renovated, and paid for it on a progressive basis. On completion, the contractor was paid in full, but within a few weeks a lien had been placed on the home by a sub-contractor, who had not received payment from the general contractor.

"This family literally paid twice for their renovations," said Mr. Tindall.

"Never pay in advance," he said. "A reputable company will not ask for advance payment—and above all, know your dealer. A written warranty is of little value unless it is backed by a reputable firm."

TAKE TIME TO CHECK

If you do not know the salesman, or do not recognize the company, take time to telephone the Better Business Bureau and check, recommends Mr. Tindall, because, he emphasizes, once a contract is signed, and if it should happen to be with a sharpie, the results can be appalling both in anxiety and financial hardships.

Questions . . .
. . . Answers

By CHARLES TAYLOR

Q. We have three bathrooms in our home. Stains collect in the toilet bowls in spite of daily scouring. The deposits have collected above the water line in the form of a ring, as well as vertical lines. I have used commercial stain remover to no avail. Do you know of anything I might use to improve this condition?

A. Try removing the stain with a solution of oxalic acid applied with a dish mop, or a weak solution of muriatic acid.

Rinse well afterwards with plenty of clear water. These acids are dangerous, so be very careful when working with either solution to avoid spatters on hands or face. I believe that your trouble may be caused by hard water which leaves mineral deposits. Plumbing supply houses now have a special commercial cleaner which, if used regularly, will prevent these stains.

Q. What causes paint to peel? We used a high quality product—at least it was one of the highest priced paints, but already it is beginning to flake and peel. It was only six months ago we did the job. We want to redo the painting, and also avoid the present problem.

A. There are several possible causes, but usually the problem of exterior paint peeling can be traced to water. Moisture finds its way behind the paint film, saturates the wood, promotes decay and destroys adhesion of the paint to the surface. See if you can find the source of the moisture and correct this condition before repainting. Also make sure the surface is thoroughly dry before painting.

Here are a few of the many possible checks for moisture: Look for leaky pipes. This source of water may seriously damage all construction materials. Tighten up poorly joined window heads and siding butts to guard against paint defects due to moisture. Check foundation walls to make sure the grade slopes away for proper drainage.

Also if you have had a new plastering job, the moisture from new plaster passes through the walls in the form of vapor and condenses on the back of siding. This can be prevented by keeping windows and doors open following the plastering. If you find any sign of dampness, try to find and correct the source.

Stamp Collecting Breaks All Barriers

By FAITH ANGUS

Perhaps the greatest asset of stamp collecting as a hobby is the fact that it is available to everyone regardless of nationality, age or income. During the past year, philately has been drawn into the prevalent whirlpool of progress and is now the top-ranking universal hobby.

Postal authorities around the world are striving to produce stamps that are instructive as well as beautiful; an increasing amount of philatelic literature is available and all types of equipment are being produced on a larger scale.

The benefits of stamp collecting in schools, hospitals, correctional institutes, etc. are recognized at last, so is the fact that stamps can be used for investment. But one of the greatest advantages is often overlooked—that children and adults with limited incomes are able to build up excellent general or topical collections with low value stamps.

A millionaire who started his career as a shoeshine boy laid the foundation of his valuable collection with stamps given to him by his patrons.

Scott's Guidebook to Stamp Collecting, by L. N. and M. Williams, is now available in paperback and contains everything that beginners should know about starting a collection.

A set of bicolored stamps and a souvenir sheet were issued early this month by Liberia to honor the Boy Scouts of that country.

A set of colorful stamps was released recently to commemorate the state visit of Queen Elizabeth to Ethiopia. Values are 5 cents, 35 cents and 60 cents. Designs show portraits of the Queen and Emperor Haile Selassie and the flags and coats of arms of the United Kingdom and Ethiopia. They are printed on fine white paper without watermark but with colored silk fibres and special gum for tropical climates.

April 2

Nature Films To Aid Fund

Two nature films will be shown in Oak Bay Junior High School at 8 p.m. April 2 to aid the Freeman King scholarship fund.

Topping the bill will be the premiere showing of the film Eskimo Arctic, which was made by photographer W. A. Edwards during a two-year period in the Arctic. Mr. Edwards will give a commentary on the film.

He is now public information officer with the federal forestry department.

Featured in the film are Eskimo life and Arctic wildlife.

AWARD WINNER

Second film will be the award winning Valley of the Swan, made by the B.C. Travel Bureau of the department of recreation and conservation. During the film photographer B. Atkins, and biologists Glen Smith and Charles Guiget will speak on behind-the-scenes tasks in making a wildlife film.

The film won the Theodore Roosevelt award as best outdoor documentary of the year.

BIRD SOUNDS

Winding up the program will be Mrs. Grace Bell who contributed bird sounds for the Valley of the Swans and has made recordings used by Cornell University Ornithological Laboratory.

She will give a demonstration of equipment used to record wildlife sounds.

The Freeman King fund was established to support an annual $250 scholarship in natural history at the University of Victoria. Goal of the fund is $5,000, $2,000 of which has already been collected.

There will be no charge for the April 2 show, but a collection will be taken.

Some Homes Are So Bad That Children Ask to Go Back to Detention

Best Home They Know

—William A. Boucher

Recreation area—an important room

By A. H. MURPHY

Last Christmas the parents of eight boys, held in the Greater Victoria Juvenile Detention Home on Pembroke Street, were asked to come down and share a turkey dinner with their sons. Not one showed up.

Parental rejection is one reason perhaps why the occasional boy or girl asks the superintendent of the intermunicipally-run institution if it isn't possible for him to stay on after his time has elapsed, or come back when his case is disposed of.

"It's a matter of security," says Charles Etchells, the man in charge. "Some of these youngsters have never known security or a proper home. Despite the fact that this is a place of detention, it provides something they need badly."

Most referrals to the home are from the Family and Children's Court. There are youngsters there awaiting trial, others whose cases have been remanded pending investigation by probation or other court officers, and some juveniles awaiting sentencing.

At one time there was no place for these youths to go during these interim periods. Some of them even ended up in the city jail.

The need for a detention home was evident and then-alderman Mrs. Margaret Christie and a few others got to work on the problem. They ended up with the home on Coldharbour Road and, after a short, sharp struggle, got all four Greater Victoria municipalities to share its cost and upkeep.

For many years before the opening of the new home, it was evident that the Coldharbour home was inadequate. So, in the late 50s, Ald. Lily Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Christie, took up the cudgels.

"This building is a triumph of intermunicipal co-operation," says Mrs. Wilson of the present home. "It took a lot of convincing to bring it into existence, but it is running smoothly and, I think, serving a great need."

You can't escape the "detention" aspect of the Pembroke Street institution—there are bars and wire mesh on the windows and the enclosed courtyard is ringed with barbed wire — but a lot of emphasis is placed on the "home" angle.

On admittance a youngster is washed up, sobered up if need be, given a change of clothing, food, medical treatment if required, and told that if he keeps his nose clean and obeys the rules, life can be pretty good at the home.

This he finds to be true. The schedule is rigid but not inflexible. Up at 7:15 a.m., wash, fold blankets and tidy cell area. Breakfast at 8:20 and work, usually clean-up, until 11:30, with the exception of a 15-minute coffee break.

Lunch is at noon, after which there are compulsory physical education classes. There are work and group counselling in the afternoon, early supper and a three or four-hour period of games, crafts and hobby work, or reading from a fairly adequate library of light literature and magazines.

Lights go out at 9:40 p.m.

There are two cell blocks, one for boys and one for girls.

Rooms are not very big and sparsely furnished but clean and brightly painted. Normally the youngsters spend only the nighttime hours in their cells.

There are rules, but they are the sort enforced in most homes. Smoking is restricted but not forbidden. Swearing and fighting are out of course, and staff is treated with titles of respect.

Food is plain, but good and plentiful. On Friday, for example, there were cereal, toast, jam and tea for breakfast; spaghetti on toast and coffee for lunch, and meatloaf with mashed potatoes, carrots and gravy, bread and butter, fruit and coffee for supper.

Discipline hasn't been a major problem, according to Mr. Etchells who, with his wife, is the court of last resort for inmates.

Extra work and remission of privileges are the principal punishments or, in extreme cases, isolation in the cell block. No one is allowed to strike an inmate under any circumstances.

In the basement are two tiled cells where drunk youngsters are sobered up on admission. And drunk juveniles are no rarity. There have been 10 this month.

Intoxication is a problem, says Mr. Etchells. The "drunk tank" cells are removed from the ordinary cell blocks, and it means that someone other than the usual night supervisor has to be on duty to see that the juveniles come to no harm.

Occasionally they smash up the cell. One did recently and a bill of $40 for repairs was sent to his parents. It was paid.

About 55 juveniles are admitted most months, and there are rarely more than 12 or 14 there at any one time, most of them boys.

The home cost about $106,000 to build and this total, along with the yearly budget of about $32,000, is split on the usual intermunicipal basis: Victoria, 41.6 per cent, Saanich, 32.2, Oak Bay 18.8 and Esquimalt, 9.2.

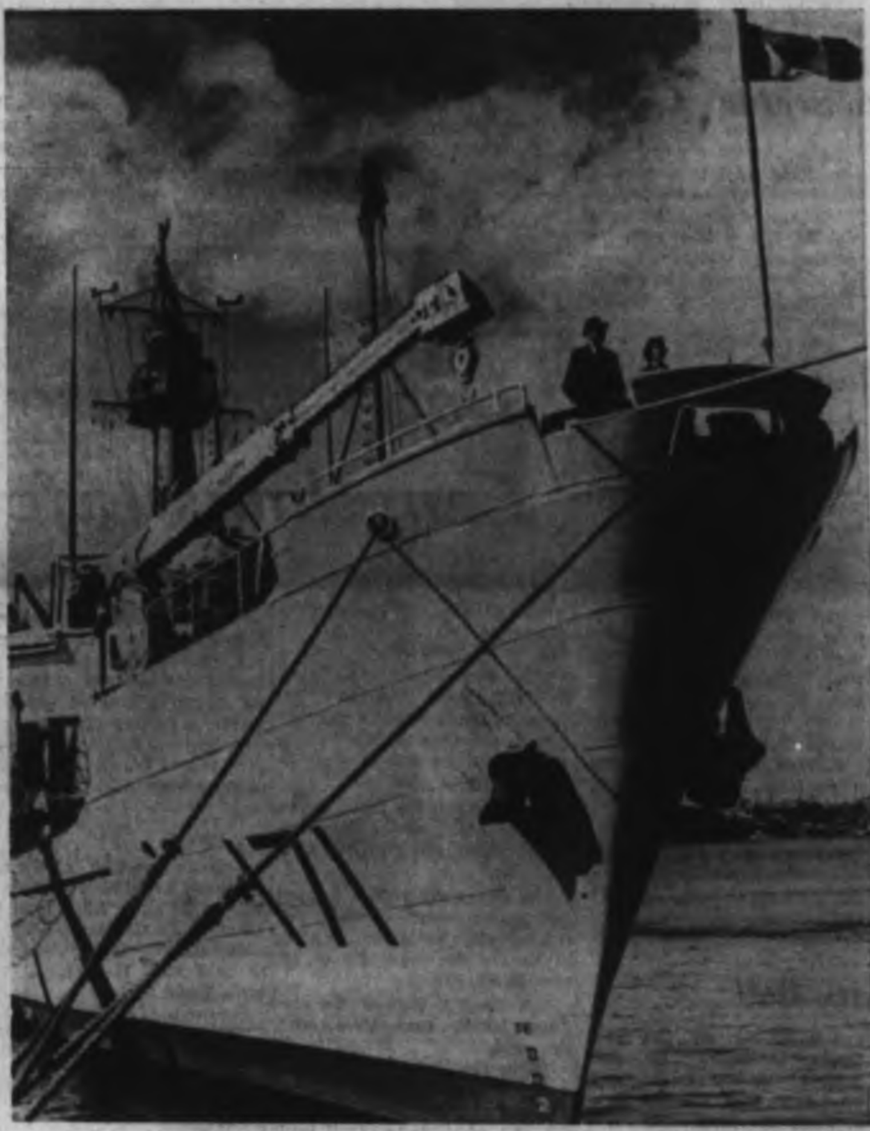
Hardy Daffodils Beat Frost Fill Beacon Hill with Blooms

Despite a crippling December frost, flowers are blooming all over Beacon Hill Park.

The frost killed many daffodils slated for Victoria's hanging baskets, but city parks officials raided park flower beds, and bought more bloom from private growers, and the baskets are hanging all around the city now.

Daffodils in Beacon Hill Park beds are blooming "by the thousands" a parks official said Saturday.

The frost has delayed the growth of many plants, but these will come up as warm weather continues.



CNAV Endeavour in Inner Harbor —W. A. Boucher

Landlubber Says:

'You Can Fall Overboard'

The Pacific Naval Laboratory's marine physics research ship CNAV Endeavour was open to the public at the CPR dock in Victoria's Inner Harbor Saturday and will be open today from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m. The Colonist sent a landlubber reporter to visit the ship and this is his story.

By GEOFFREY MINISH

Reporters, the lamented A. J. Liebling once wrote, get to know nothing about everything.

His observation crossed my mind Saturday as I toured the CNAV Endeavour, berthed at the CPR dock in the Inner Harbor.

The Endeavour, for those who like myself have not been following the story, is the Defence Research Board's recently-built oceanographic research vessel.

They opened her up Saturday for the taxpayers to see what $4,500,000 looks like in one lump.

There wasn't exactly a rush to accept the invitation. At times the Endeavour was so quiet you could hear the teacups rattling in the Empress.

Most of the visitors appeared to be relatives or friends of the crew. Perhaps the word had gone out they weren't serving free tots of rum.

Mindful of editorial orders to Get A Good Story, I climbed the ladders up to the wheelhouse, wondering how much a smart lawyer could hit the navy for if I slipped and broke a leg, which seemed only too likely.

There was an officer in the wheelhouse to answer visitors' questions. Tapping the glass of the windscreen, or whatever it's called, I asked: "How thick is this stuff?"

"I don't know," he grinned, "I haven't measured it."

Well, I thought, climbing back down the ladder, you meet comedians in every walk of life.

Someone had said the lab was the most interesting part of the ship. I made my way there and found the entry barred by pieces of rope cunningly fixed across the open doorway.

All I could see was a water cooler and a refrigerator. At least, that's all I've got down in my notes. I was afraid to make too many, in case I got nabbed as a spy.

(That would have made a good story, all right, but enterprise has its limits. And the management won't pay you overtime if you're in jail.)

For collectors of useless information, however, I garnered the following facts:

The Endeavour's speedometer, or whatever it's called, has to date clocked up 747 nautical miles;

February's winner of the first prize ($50) in the CNAV monthly draw was G. J. Davis, an oiler aboard the Clifton;

If you stand right up at the front of the Endeavour, you can fall overboard.

You don't have to accept my word for all this, however. Visitors' day continues today from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.

Maybe they'll be hanging someone from the yardarm.

Siebner Work In Montreal

Mr. Siebner is one of 44 artists selected for the exhibition. Works were chosen from submissions by 1,079 artists.

Driver Collapses, Dies After Crash

A Victoria man was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Joseph's Hospital Saturday minutes after his car was involved in a two-car accident at Blanshard and McClure.

Thomas Cawsey, 46, of 321 Robertson collapsed at approximately the time his car, eastbound on McClure, collided with the second vehicle. Police identified the owner of the second car as Michael Cooke, 1821 Pemberton.

City Dog Show April 9 and 10

The Victoria City Kennel Club spring championship show will take place April 9 and 10 in the Victoria Curling Club.

Marine Station

Major Boost Offered To University

The University of Victoria could become the major national institution in oceanography and marine biology by utilizing the projected $3,000,000 federal marine station at Colwood, federal transport minister J. W. Pickersgill said in Victoria Saturday.

"The Colwood site is a wonderful opportunity for the University of Victoria in a scientific specialty it can exploit to gain a national reputation," he said.

The minister announced Saturday that construction of the Colwood station would cost more than $3,000,000.

He did not pinpoint a construction starting date, but said there wouldn't be much construction this season.

The new centre's location is on the former seaward defence site, where a wharf and finger wharf already exist.

The centre will handle ships of the coast guard and the oceanographic service of the mines and technical surveys department, and will include new service offices, maintenance shops and stores facilities.

LIKE BEDFORD

Mr. Pickersgill said, "It will replace existing facilities of both departments in Victoria and provide the west coast with an oceanography institute similar to the Bedford Institute of Oceanography at Dartmouth, N.S."

Mr. Pickersgill said the Colwood location was chosen because of its seclusion, harbor access and the fact the government already possesses ample land on the site for future expansion.

Fellowship For Carson

A senior Canada Council fellowship has been awarded to Prof. John Carson of the classics department at the University of Victoria.

Prof. Carson will use the $6,000 award to engage in research in Great Britain during 1965-66.

University Poised For Jazz Seminar

Jazz will come to the University of Victoria Monday.

Paul Winter and his sextet will give a public concert at 12:30 p.m. Monday in the Gordon Head gym, to be followed by a jazz seminar in the Student Union Building.

Mr. Winter and his group have played in the White House and have toured 23 countries under auspices of the U.S. state department.

Vocational Project

Silence on School Worries Trustees

By CHARLES LA VERTU

Officials of the three Lower Vancouver Island school boards have expressed concern over the provincial government's silence on the proposed $2,500,000 vocational school in the Victoria area.

"We are quite concerned because the school is on the bottom of the list," said Sooke Trustee E. J. Bartamus. "We are also concerned with the apparent lack of funds for this school."

Earlier, the provincial government indicated it would build a vocational school somewhere in the area.

AREA RECOMMENDED

"A year ago the three school boards, Greater Victoria, Sooke and Saanich, wrote to the education department recommending the Burnside, Tillicum and Trans-Canada area as the most suitable," Saanich Trustee Mrs. Nora Lindsay said.

"This is the best area to serve Sooke, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, the Saanich Peninsula and the Malahat; another point in its favor is that it is well serviced by bus transportation," she said.

"Greater Victoria adult education students paid $100,000 in tuition fees last year," said Victoria Trustee Lloyd Clarkson.

"This, I feel, is a good indication of the need for a vocational school in the area.

6,000 STUDENTS

"We have more than 6,000 students in the adult division.

"We needed this school three years ago and we are afraid we won't get it because of the drain on provincial and federal funds caused by the vocational wings."

While waiting for the vocational school to be established, additional facilities will be made available for daily daytime courses operating from 4 to 10 p.m., said Mr. Clarkson.

Tilikum Is City's Records Show

The City of Victoria owns the Tilikum, according to Mrs. George I. Warren.

Widow of former Victoria Visitors Bureau commissioner, she reports having found records showing city ownership of the famed dugout.

DUGOUT MOVED

Documentary proof of ownership was sought when provincial authorities arranged for the Indian dugout to be moved from Thunderbird Park to the Maritime Museum which will open this summer in Bastion Square.

Mrs. Warren said her husband's records show that the vessel had been transported to Victoria from the Thames by a shipping company, free of charge.

Ownership then reverted to the city through the Visitors Bureau, by arrangement with George I. Warren and Mayor Carl J. Pendray.

Arrangements were then made with the CPR for the Tilikum to be displayed outside the Crystal Garden.

NOT GOVERNMENT'S

"At no time has the Tilikum been owned by the government," said Victoria Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

"There is no doubt the city owns her and there is no doubt she is in the right place, where she will be preserved," he added.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

Almost everyone had on their new spring hats at the University Women's Scholarship tea at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel yesterday afternoon.

The receiving line was as colorful as a garden border. Mrs. J. L. Andrews wore an off the face in deep mauvy pink, Mrs. Malcolm Taylor had a high, swirled affair of almost cocoa tulle and vice president, Mrs. R. A. Fraser had a floral headpiece in delicious shades of pink. The guest of honor was Sharon Runolfsson, scholarship winner.

Dr. Olga Jardine who was one of the pourers had a lovely deep sea blue suit, about the same blue as the waters of Oak Bay yesterday, and a hat covered in flowers in shaded blue.

Was talking to Lois Haggen, a special guest, who hadn't been to a University tea for quite some time. She had a small woven straw hat, the colors of the waters of Hawaii —the turquoise shade matching her suit.

Another special guest was Mrs. Daryl Elford who was wearing that perennial spring favorite, navy and white.

Young Anne Tusar was there with Mrs. A. J. Tullis. Anne will be graduating from Victoria University this year and her plans now are to visit an aunt in Sweden this summer and then go on to Geneva to further her studies in languages.

Globe Trotting

A Victorian who gets around the globe more than most is Mrs. Norma MacDonald. So much so that when I meet her I greet her with "Where are you going or where have you been?"

This time she had it both ways. Returning recently from a short trip to Paris she is now looking forward to going to Red China next month.

Norma had just received her visa for this trip when I met her on Fort Street the other day.

And she was excited about the prospect of visiting Red China, one of the few places she hasn't been before. She plans to leave here about April 28 to fly to Hong Kong so she can actually be in China for May 1. After this she will go to Korea and then to Japan at the end of May for a meeting of the International Hotel Association. Blossom trees and gardens are at about their best at that time, Norma tells me.

Enroute to Seattle

Mr. D. A. Ross was out at the airport last night to meet his son, Dr. David J. Ross who will be here until Monday night when he goes to Seattle to attend conferences with Boeing Aircraft in regard to late developments in atomic reactor power plants. Dr. Ross, who is married to the former Vivian Fox of Victoria, a graduate of the Royal Jubilee School of Nursing, is professor of nuclear physics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass.

Athens is Destination

When Kay Knapton retired from Hagar Investments (she was a director and partner) she had no plans except a trip in the Spring. Well, Spring has arrived and Kay and Jean McQueen (secretary to Oak Bay Municipal clerk) start off this Wednesday.

They fly to Montreal then on to Lisbon. A few days at Estoril urged by Jean's brother, Ian McQueen, a consulting engineer in Vancouver. Then a couple of days in Rome enroute to Athens where they have a treat in store.

Jean's cousin, Prof. Homer Thompson, an archeologist with the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, is waiting to show them around. Funnily enough, Prof. Thompson and Kay's brother, Prof. E. J. Knapton, graduated from University of British Columbia at the same time. Prof. Knapton, now teaching English at Wheaton College near Boston, has recently had his book on European history published.

Back to Kay and Jean. First thing they are going on a cruise in the Aegean Sea, stopping at Grecian Islands and then back to Athens where Prof. Thompson will take them on a tour of the archeological sites, museums and a two-day visit to Delphi.

Enroute to London, they will make stops at Venice and in Switzerland.

Jean will fly home from London and Kay plans to stay on for about two months visiting relatives. From Yorkshire she'll go to Scotland and drive back south.

The Charity Ball

Just about everyone is talking about Victoria's first Charity Ball that is going to be held at the Empress on April 10 in conjunction with the Flower Festival. It is sponsored by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Pearkes are lending their patronage to the affair.

Having cocktails at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. H. Hummel before the ball will be Mr. and Mrs. J. Egoyan, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. S. Marquand, Mr. and Owen Flood, Major and Mrs. Douglas Hill-Tout, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. K. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lovric, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Goult, Mr. Eric Clarke and Miss Taylor.

It will be dessert and coffee at the home Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Young, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Nixon, Dr. and Mrs. S. Smith, Mrs. June Love and Mr. L. Bradley will be there.

Among others making reservations are Dr. and Mrs. Glenn Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas J. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Les Parkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney J. Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Horne, Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Bell, Dr. and Mrs. J. Wong and Major and Mrs. D. B. Cecil.

Brims are strongly represented in this year's spring hat collections. Typical is this sombrero-styled white straw by Hattie Carnegie. Showing at the back is a head-hugging sports cap that can be worn separately. (CP Photo)

Georgia Peach Says

Daily Exercise Lengthens Life

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Exercise helps you today, and in the future, to a longer life.

This your physician probably would tell you. This also, 34-year-old Sandi Kane, a Georgia peach, preaches as she travels the country on behalf of physical fitness.

Miss Kane holds that "if you exercise daily, and I do mean daily, you'll add five years to your life."

The fitness expert, who has not one unnecessary inch on her figure, gets upset about the girth of the nation, especialy of its over-35 age group.

Too many of the over 35s are "just letting themselves go," she said.

"With the stresses of making a living and raising a family, the average person tends to forget his or her physical well being," she said. "Fifteen minutes a day is all you need to acquire the exercise habit. I think that most people realize that exercise in moderation should be regular. Not just for weekends. But they'll start a program and not stick with it because they want to see results now."

Sandi-Kane, a blue-eyed blonde, talks fitness and demonstrates ways of acquiring it with exercises using weights. She said she has covered more than 100,000 air miles since last May, appearing before civic clubs, women's clubs and high school assemblies.

Her employer makes home exercise equipment including dumb-bells. The bells now are made in a light version—six-pound total for two—for the women.

"Used properly, they do not develop bulging muscle," said Miss Kane. "They tighten, firm and contour the body."

To the woman who says, "I exercise all the time—washing, scrubbing, cooking, marketing," Miss Kane answers, "She's getting movement, yes, but not exercise. Household chores are not going to prevent her from getting a bulging abdomen, sagging pectoral muscles—the number-one and two figure problems of most women."

YM-YWCA

Regular meeting of Ladies' Auxiliary to YM-YWCA will be held at 10 a.m., April 1, in the YWCA. Final plans will be made for the Spring Bridge to be held April 14 at Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Home in Revelstoke For Newlyweds

Arrangements of pastel-toned carnations and other spring blossoms accented with white streamers, decorated St. Luke's Anglican Church yesterday, when Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff heard the marriage vows uniting Andrea Joy Fill and Gerald Martin.

Parents of the young couple are Mr. and Mrs. Howard James Fill, 3500 Maplewood Road, Victoria, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Charles Martin of Medicine Hat, Alta. Mr. Fill gave his daughter in marriage at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride wore a short-length gown of peau de soie and taffeta that was fashioned with a slightly scooped neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. Her tiered elbow-length veil misted from a tiara of lily of the valley and orange blossoms. Red and white carnations with heather and white satin ribbons formed her cascade bouquet.

Miss Sherry Fill was the only attendant for her sister in a short-length gown of aqua green brocade, topped with a matching lace jacket. A toning hat and white accessories completed the ensemble. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white carnations highlighted with heather and pink satin ribbons.

Ian Fill, the bride's brother, was best man and guests were ushered to pews marked with white satin rosettes and heather by William Maycock.

For a buffet luncheon that followed, the home of the bride's parents was decorated with arrangements of white and mauve hyacinths and mauve primroses. A three-tier wedding cake made by her aunt, Mrs. F. Martin, centred the bride's table.

Frederick Martin proposed the toast to his niece's happiness.

Following a honeymoon trip to Vancouver, the newlyweds will make their home in Revelstoke, B.C.

The bride's going-away ensemble was a red cotton knit suit, accented with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations and hyacinths.

HOW ARE WE ABLE TO OFFER THIS SERVICE . . .
We are not a small loan company, discount company or an acceptance corporation. We deal only in loans of more than $1,500. By doing so we eliminate the high cost of servicing such as would be borne by a finance company making ten loans of $150 each. We deal only in mortgage loans for long terms and reasonable rates.

Many a home owner today may find that he is in the uncomfortable situation of having several high interest rate, short-term obligations that lead to over-burdening monthly payments. Why not give us a call to see if we can arrange to consolidate all these obligations into one low-cost long-term low monthly payment loan.

WHAT WE CAN OFFER YOU . . .
1. Low payment—reasonable rates—long-term loans.
2. Prompt, complete and courteous service.
3. All you have to do is to own a home and it does not have to be completely paid for.

Folks—our loan service can be of great assistance to you. Why not call us and if one of our loans can help you our advice is free and you are under no obligation whatsoever. Simply call 386-7578 before you come in and give us a few necessary facts so that you can take advantage of our prompt and effective loan service.

New Liberty shirts at Wilson's . . .

The insouciant dinner hostess is simply the well-organized woman who has reduced the possible moments of crisis (will the steak be tender?) to a minimum.

Mecca for the fashion-conscious . . .

There's something about Mary Constance's sparkling windows that never fails to lure us in . . . on the theory that such attractive window offerings must presage more of the same inside the store . . . and we've yet to be disappointed! . . To mention just a few of the smart new dresses that caught our eye this past week . . . a beige on black zebra striped pure silk sheath with short double-breasted jacket, the very popular narrow tie belt . . . A sleeveless navy and white print sheath with roll collar peeping over the high neckline of buttoned down navy linen duster . . . A Leslie Fay dress of black linen, its beautiful simplicity relieved only by three rows of cotton lace insertion around the skirt and circling the short sleeves . . . Jumpers are still very good, and we saw at Mary Constance the counterpart of one we'd admired on a TV show a few nights ago . . . Comes in navy or black linen . . . long-sleeved white blouse with thin red or blue stripes . . soft tie bow at the neckline . . . There's a pink crepe cocktail dress with long skinny sheer sleeves, V-neck, which we're told looks terrific on . . . Pure silk shanting jacket dresses in soft blue or rose . . . perfect for mothers of the happy pair, come wedding days . . . Mary Constance Dress Shop, 734 Fort St., EV 3-4932.

Country magic in the city's heart . . .

We were awakened bright and early the other morning by a burst of melody . . . issuing from the tiny throats of dozens of song birds greeting the sunrise from the arbutus tree in front of our bedroom window . . . A few moments of sheer magic . . . the stuff that dreams and poetry are made of . . . but not at all unusual here at Christie Point where delightful happenings are almost a commonplace . . . You'll have to forgive our enthusiasm, but there's scarcely a day goes by that we don't find something new to delight us in this rustic city-country retreat we call home! . . . But to get down to more practical things, there are still a few choice suites . . . in family or adult complexes . . . as well as a couple of town houses . . available in this unique apartment development . . . surrounded by 15 acres of beautifully landscaped grounds . . . and the sparkling waters of Portage Inlet . . . Really attractive dwellings at reasonable rentals . . . With more outstanding features than you can count on both hands . . . and all this less than 10 minutes drive from downtown! . . . Why not phone for information . . . or come out and see for yourself real soon? . . . Christie Point Apartments, 2891 Craigowan Road, 385-6641.

You can tell those who are unable to count calories . . . they have figures to prove it.

Don't make a move without Cantin's . . .

Did we ever tell you about the time back East when we had had some furniture moved by an "unknown" in the hope of saving a few dollars! . . . Well, it's a sad tale and perhaps better left untold . . . except to say that the cost of repairing and re-finishing was staggering . . . and to caution you never to fall prey to such foolishness! . . . One thing certain, if you entrust your moving to Cantin's you'll never have cause for regret . . . They're the most careful, expert people imaginable . . . They've made packing and moving an art . . . in which they take a great deal of pride . . . They're versed in the most modern techniques right now . . . but are not content to rest on their laurels . . . they're constantly on the look-out for some better way of handling a job . . . Speed . . . efficiency . . . loving care . . . that's what you get when you put your move in Cantin's capable hands . . . The estimate they give you will be on the nose to within a fraction (closest estimates in the business, we've heard!) . . . And unless you really want to, you don't need to lift a finger yourself . . . Cantin's will come in after breakfast and pack and whisk away everything but the burnt toast . . . have you settled in your new home before you know what's happened! . . . Cantin's Moving and Storage, 742 Pembroke St., EV 5-3476.

Depersonalized Nursing

On Way Out

New Look at Medicine

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

New concepts of medical practice in general, and nursing in particular, were discussed by four panelists at a conference for registered nurses of British Columbia at the McPherson Playhouse Saturday.

After a key-note address by Dr. Helen Mussallem, in which she claimed that present patterns of education "are obsolete and tragically futile in the mid 1960's," Dr. Donald Anderson of UBC told the nurses that they are not alone in their dilemma.

All branches of the professional health services are examining their role in society, Dr. Anderson pointed out, and outlined new trends in the field.

The not-too-distant future will see comprehensive medical care, in which doctors, nurses and social workers will work together in the home rather than in the hospital.

The general practitioner will play a more comprehensive role than the specialist.

The physician will be a guest in the hospital as is the patient. He will be just one healer out of many.

Profound unrest in medical education institutions will see great changes in training, in which the aim will be to teach doctors to "deal helpfully with people," said Dr. Anderson quoting from the MacFarlane report.

Dr. Anderson sees a future in which medicine is taken out of the hospitals and into the community.

"We must take a new look at the health team service consisting of nurse, doctor, pharmacist and the social science professions.

"It is only with shared education of all health professionals that this welding can occur.

"Nurses must learn to function within the system," said Miss Mary Richmond, director of nurses, Vancouver General hospital.

"We must recognize that health services are delivered through big organizations, where the benefits of advanced technology are best utilized.

Suggestions for improving hospital efficiency include:

Assign staff in such a way that the nurse can see her patients: The team concept has been overcome, resulting in a depersonalized form of nursing.

Differentiate between the roll of the professional and the practical nurse and assign more responsibility to the non-nurse.

Reward creativity and initiative, not conformity.

Tremendous possibilities of automation in the hospital were described by Lloyd Detwiller, consultant administrator for the Health Services Centre at UBC.

It is estimated that approximately 25 per cent of the nurse's time will be saved, freeing her for work with the patients.

Information from this fantastic computer drum, with a memory bank storing millions of facts, is available anywhere in the hospital at the touch of a button.

In addition, the computer reduces the chance of human error. Built-in controls enable it to check the dosage, and if there is an error a message is sent back requesting a check on the prescription.

Opening the panel discussion was Dr. Malcolm Taylor, president of the University of Victoria.

He hoped that a school of nursing could be established at the University of Victoria before too long.

Here and There

Arriving tomorrow from California where they have been holidaying for a month are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Gaston. They will stay for about ten days or so with their son, J. H. Gaston, scientist at the Pacific Naval Laboratory and his family at their Rockcrest home before returning to Toronto.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Janes are back from a four-month stay in Santa Barbara and are at the Prince Charles until their apartment in Beckley Manor is ready.

The Nightingale Image

More than 400 nurses attending a conference to examine the changing role of the nurse in society heard a new version of the Florence Nightingale image from Dr. Donald Anderson.

"To some nurses, the humanism of the role makes up for the poor salary and the drudgery," he said. "But I suspect the real Miss Nightingale wandered through the corridors with her lamp to make sure the soldiers didn't steal the bed sheets."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to say I believe you did me an injustice. I signed my letter Austin Heartache thinking you surely would be discreet and not use that signature. Well, my telephone has not stopped ringing since that letter appeared.

I am the mother of the adopted daughter who is being left out of her aunt's will. My son, however, and another niece are going to inherit the bulk of a large estate. I wrote to ask if I should speak to my sister about this. You said "an inheritance is a gift and your sister does not owe your daughter anything." Then you added, "You sound a little money-hungry to me, Lady."

Believe me, I do not give a hang about the money. I am just concerned that my daughter will be awfully hurt. Adopted children are often sensitive about being adopted, especially if there is a flesh-and-blood brother or sister in the family. All I want is to spare my daughter the pain of being discriminated against. — MRS. AUSTIN AGAIN.

Dear Mrs. Austin: I apologize for using the signature which revealed your identity. I had the strong feeling that you wanted me to print it. When readers ask me to withhold the name of the city or state I always do so.

You may be pleased to know that several hundred people wrote in to take your side. They said you did not sound money-hungry at all — that it seemed clear your major concern was protection of the feelings of the adopted girl.

Since your second letter finally makes your motives clear to me I have a different word of advice to offer. Tell your sister that you would like her to treat your children equally, and that if she does not wish to leave your daughter an inheritance she should not leave your son anything.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 19-year-old girl who is madly in love with a handsome fellow. He is also 19.

We have been going steady for six months and I was sure he loved me as much as I love him. Last week, for no reason, he suggested that we knock off the steady arrangement. I asked why. He replied, "You should go with other fellows to see if you are as madly in love with me as you think."

I don't want to go with anyone else, Ann. He is the one I love and there are no doubts in my mind. I am heartsick and cannot figure him out. Please help me.—NOT SO PEACHY IN GEORGIA.

Dear Not Peachy: Someone should produce a dictionary and define the real meaning of certain phrases. For example: When a fellow says, "I think you should go with other fellows so see if you are as madly in love with me as you think," he means: "I would like to go with other girls because I'm not sure about my feelings for you."

Don't fight it. If your romance can't stand the test, be thankful you learned the truth before it was too late.

Ex-Service Women

Biggest Gathering Since War

9th Reunion

By PHYLIS BOWMAN

History will be made in Victoria next Saturday when one of the largest gathering of ex-service women to be held since the Second World War will take place at the Empress Hotel. More than 500 women from all parts of British Columbia, Alberta and the western States are scheduled to attend the Ex-Service Women's Ninth Annual Reunion.

Sponsored by the Ex-Service Women's League No. 182 of the Royal Canadian Legion of Victoria, the reunion will start with registration at 10 p.m., followed by a parade to the Cenotaph to lay a wreath accompanied by a piper.

At 3 p.m., there will be a reception at Government House as guests of Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. G. R. Pearkes. Then at 6 p.m. there will be a cocktail hour at the Empress Hotel, followed by a banquet and entertainment featuring Jerry Gosley.

This will be the largest reunion to date, for nearly 1,000 applications have been received by the executive, whereas there has been an attendance of about 300 at the eight previous reunions which have been held in various cities in the province.

The idea of holding an annual reunion began with the local Ex-Service Women's League, who held an experimental one here in 1957.

The Ex-Service Women's League is not to be confused with the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Royal Canadian Legion, for every member of the league belonged to one of the women's services in the Second World War or to the Auxiliary Territorial Services or the Nursing Corps in the First World War.

Typical of the many smartly-uniformed women who served in the Canadian forces during the Second World War are these members of the Royal Air Force (Women's Division) who are taking part in a Victory Loan parade in downtown Victoria in October, 1943.

CWAC

More than 40,000 Canadian women joined the armed forces in Second World War, with the largest number, 12,761, serving in the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

This corps was born in August 1941 when an Order-in-Council authorized the formation of a corps to replace soldiers in non-combatant duties. First recruits for the new corps reported on Sept. 1, and companies were set up in the 11 military districts in Canada.

Headquarters were established in Ottawa and senior Commander the late Joan Kennedy of Victoria was appointed the highest ranking officer. Mrs. Kennedy attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

In January, 1942, the first "CWACs" in Victoria numbered 170.

The girls received subsistence and clothing allowances until quarters were built for them at Work Point and they received uniforms and were sent for training to the Western Division Basic Training Centre at Vermilion, Alberta.

Finally barracks were built to accommodate 208 girls, and there were more than 800 CWACs on strength in MD11, which included Victoria, Vancouver, Gordon Head and Nanaimo.

Besides assuming jobs as cooks, nurses, clerks and drivers, the girls learned to operate telecord machines and projection equipment, mastered ciphering and worked as instrument mechanics, spray painters, armament fitters and took over many more technical jobs from the men.

RCAF WDs

The next service to send girls to Victoria was the Royal Canadian Air Force. In April, 1942, Wing Officer L. M. Crowther visited the city to lay the groundwork for the posting of airwomen to the Western Air Command. Attached to the British Women's Auxiliary to the Air Force, she had come to Canada in July of 1941 with three other British Air Force officers to organize the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) in Canada.

By the end of 1942, the first 50 WDs were settled at Patricia Bay and 60 girls were housed at Kildonan House, 883 Foul Bay Road, the former Ross Sutherland home. Most of the girls at Kildonan House worked at the Belmont Building which had been taken over by the federal government for RCAF headquarters.

The WDs were the first service women to be discharged, with the whole unit disbanded by March, 1946. Some of them were re-engaged for short period of time, due to the fact that there was an extreme shortage of personnel in a number of critical trades.

The first Victoria girl to join the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service was Helen Ockenden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ockenden, 1240 Bewdley Avenue. She became a unit officer at HMCS Cornwallis with the rank of lieutenant-commander.

The first class of 67 "Wrens" or "Jill Tars" began their basic training at Kingsmill House, Ottawa, on August 29, 1942. The service expanded its number to 6,783. Of this number 5,883 were on active service at one time, in April, 1945, when the organization reached its peak strength.

The largest group of Wrens consisted of general duty writers, and large numbers of others served as messengers, mess women, wardroom attendants and cooks.

They took over technical jobs too — teletype operators, visual signallers, wireless operators, coders, sick berth attendants, sailmakers, operational plotters, draftsmen, electrical artificers—more than 30 categories in all.

Some of the girls even had tattoos imprinted on their arms and hands. According to one Halifax "tattoo artist" who had "decorated" more than 500 Wrens during the war, she said girls wouldn't go for anchors or snakes or flowers. No lush sentimentality either. They preferred something in cameo — their names, the names of their boy friends, a date to remember —all very neat and small. The most popular place to have a tattoo was under their wrist-watch, he said.

In Victoria there were 300 "Jill Tars" stationed at Moresby House on Esquimalt Road. The quarters were named after Admiral Jasper Moresby of Esquimalt fame, and the unit officer was Lieut. Cmdr. Norah Allen, who came here from service in Newfoundland to open the house.

A big occasion for the Navy girls here was the celebration of their third birthday. They paraded through the downtown streets of Victoria, 300 strong, led by the RCN band. Taking the salute at the base at Crystal Gardens was Capt. C. D. Donald, CB, Naval Officer-in-charge, Esquimalt, accompanied by Mrs. W. C. Woodward. The parade was followed by tea aboard the HMCS Uganda and a dance at the Crystal Gardens. A feature of the event was a huge birthday cake made by CPO R. C. Cooke of HMCS Givinchy.

This service began disbanding soon after the end of the war, with the last seven Wrens and their commanding officer, Lieut. Phyllis McKay, leaving Moresby House on July 31, 1946.

Most of the girls who joined the forces volunteered for duty overseas. Lasting friendships were made and they all agreed that service life was healthy and interesting, with the esprit de corps being especially high.

Many of these old friendships will be renewed and many memories recalled at the reunion Saturday. For every single member of the women's forces share one thing in common — a quiet pride that they gave of their time and efforts during the war to help their country.

Dr. Noble Speaks Monday Morning

Victoria University's dean of women will speak on the changing modern world, at the 19th annual consumer credit conference in the Empress Hotel, Monday.

Dr. Phoebe Noble will address a breakfast meeting sponsored by the Victoria Credit Women's Breakfast Club.

Monday noon, the ladies will join other conference delegates for a speech by B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Mr. Bonner will speak on "looking ahead in '65" at a provincial government-sponsored luncheon.

Tapestry, Rugs On Program

A program on tapestry and rug techniques by Mrs. C. T. Skinner was highlight of a recent meeting of the Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild. She described the making of small tapestries on frames using the Swedish knot method. Samples of various techniques were shown by Mrs. H. Hodson, Mrs. G. Anstey, Mrs. H. Steggles and Mrs. W. F. U. Copeman. Mrs. W. C. Winkel, vice-president, chaired the meeting.

Mrs. W. C. Higgins reported that the annual exhibition will be held in June. Her committee will include Mrs. B.C. Ryan, Miss Harriet Bell, Mrs. H. L. Gonnason, Mrs. D. B. McLellan, Mrs. P. Townsend, Sidney, and Mrs. Skinner.

It was reported that secretary, Mrs. A. Palmer, had sent a report of the year's activities to the Canadian Handicrafts Guild in Montreal. A bulletin for the Guild of Canadian Weavers was read by Mrs. Anstey who heads a committee for writing them. Mrs. H. Hodson reported on the Bastion Square Arts and Crafts Society. It was announced that the guild will join the Community Arts Council of Victoria. Mrs. S. Pickles showed samples of weaving by handicapped persons taught at the Arbutus Crafts Centre on Vancouver Street.

Eight (Beatle) Arms To Hold You Tight!

By CATHY LOWTHER

The two top British groups, the Beatles and the DC5, have slapped titles on their new movies.

The DC 5 is calling theirs The Dave Clark Five Runs Wild and the Beatle film, previously just Beatles No. 2, now is Eight Arms to Hold You.

Speaking of the Beatles, somewhere in Britain there is a group of fans devoted solely to getting our boys a national honor.

You know, one day a year, you don't comb your hair and, in between yeh-yehs you yell Happy Beatle Day. Or some such.

Kitte's Teen Letters

"Dear Kitte Turmell: I am in love with a boy who is in love with me. I think the world of him and my parents despise him. I want to talk to them, but they are not the kind of people you can talk to. Every time I try to talk about him, they always try to forget him.

"How can I go on loving him, if they will not let me?

"It is very hard for me, and I would not give him up for the world. Can you please advise me what to do?—'Worried'."

Dear "Worried": Just tell them you can't be happy until you open up the talk barriers. Ask them to tell you what they don't like about him. Then ask them to listen while you tell what you admire in him that might spark their admiration.

Next, request permission to have him over for short visits at times that suit your parents, so they can get acquainted. Then they may see what you admire—and you can find out how well he does, or does not, fit into your family pattern.

Be sure your wish to "go on loving him" is not just a whim to defy your parents.

(For Kitte Turmell's free help-packed leaflet: "Is It Really Love?" send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, care of this newspaper.)

Confidential to "confused": Since you are planning to break up with your "steady," do so, now, with the friendly understanding that you are both free to continue to date — and also to date others. Then tell the friend you want to see that you will be happy to date him, next opportunity. Judging from your letter, you can take your pick of dates and should not be tied down to any one until you're sure that you want to date him exclusively and feel confident that this wish is mutual.

Secrets Are Like Knives—Used Carelessly, They Stab

By KITTE TURMELL

Secrets are like little knives. Used carelessly, they stab. For example:

Carol is as curious as a kitten, but with claws. Frank is friendly, eager to tell all he knows when Carol purrs up to him. Then she yowls it to the world.

Roy regards himself as Mr. Inside Dope at work, but some call him the office snoop. As for Judy, everybody knows she can keep a secret because she's so secretive. But nobody cares much either, and nobody knows Judy.

So what's the safe and sane way to handle secrets? I asked that question of an expert, Dan Tyler Moore. As a paratroop captain, Moore was sent out during the Second World War, to set up a counter-spy net in Cairo, Egypt. Out of this experience, he wrote two books.

"A spy has to learn others' secrets while he guards his own," said Dan Moore. "A teen-ager only has to know how to keep them. The first thing he must decide is what to keep secret, and when.

"The test is this: "If information shows someone in an unfair light, or could upset or embarrass that person unnecessarily, then he should keep it to himself. In brief, if it hurts, don't tell."

What if your big problem seems to be how to keep a secret?

Dan Moore says: "It's simple. Don't let anybody know you have one. Most secrets are spilled because somebody can't stand keeping one bottled up and says, 'I just heard something terrific—sorry I can't tell you what it was!' He's inviting questions and because he likes attention, he starts hinting and eventually will tell too much."

"Sometimes a teen-ager is known to have confidential information, about plans for a special party, say. What then?" I asked.

Dan Moore: "Then he or she doesn't talk. If someone asks point-blank, answer lightly, 'Sorry, but I've been sworn to deepest secrecy' or 'Ask me that question in two weeks.' That will stop the queries, with no hard feelings."

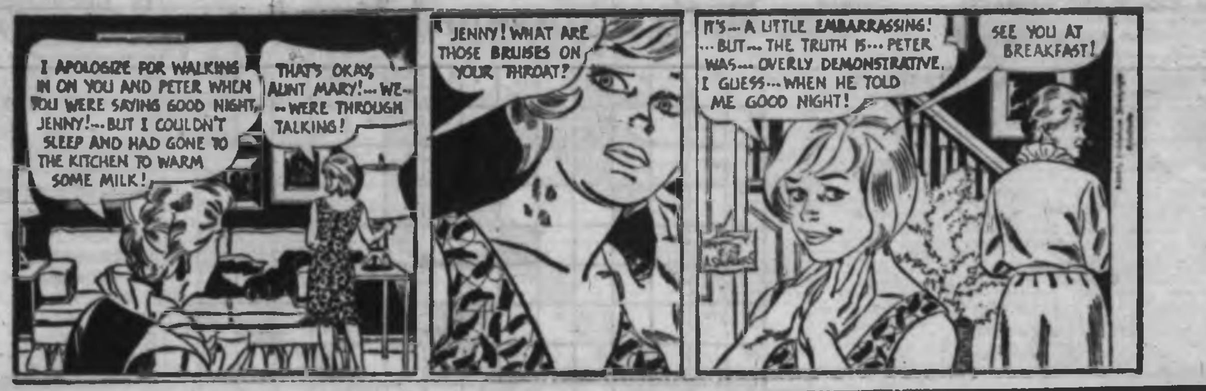
MARY WORTH



I APOLOGIZE FOR WALKING IN ON YOU AND PETER WHEN YOU WERE SAYING GOOD NIGHT, JENNY!—BUT I COULDN'T SLEEP AND HAD GONE TO THE KITCHEN TO WARM SOME MILK!
THAT'S OKAY, AUNT MARY!—WE—WERE THROUGH TALKING!
JENNY! WHAT ARE THOSE BRUISES ON YOUR THROAT?
IT'S—A LITTLE EMBARRASSING!—BUT—THE TRUTH IS—PETER WAS—OVERLY DEMONSTRATIVE, I GUESS—WHEN HE TOLD ME GOOD NIGHT!
SEE YOU AT BREAKFAST!

Economy

What is "FOREST" Siding?

A new and attractive type of siding that comes from specially selected cedar logs sawn to bring out all the distinctive character of knots, burls and grain.

How to finish "FOREST"

"Forest has a distinctive horizontal shadow line that will enhance the beauty of your home.

If you wish to preserve the natural rustic effect of "Forest" apply a coat of oil filler first, then varnish or shellac. "Forest" siding also takes paint beautifully if you wish a colored finish.

YOU can easily apply "FOREST" cedar siding

Many home owners have applied this modern, beautiful "Forest" siding themselves without the slightest difficulty.

BRIDGE QUIZ

Last week's Quiz situations showed how you can sometimes double for takeout even though you have opened the bidding. This week, we look at these situations from the opposite side of the table — through the eyes of the player who has to respond to this special takeout double. For him, the guiding light is that the double shows a very strong opening, plus support for all suits, especially majors, except that bid by the opponents. Since he has already shown weakness by passing, doubler's partner may be justified in making an encouraging response on only a few points, particularly if those points are not in the opponents' suit.

Neither vulnerable, the bidding goes:

North	East	South	West
1♠	2♣	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	?

What should South bid?

a. ♠ 9 7 6 ♦ 10 6 4 2
♥ Q 6 ♣ 8 7 5 3

b. ♠ Q 2 ♦ Q 3
♥ K 10 8 6 5 ♣ 8 5 4 3

c. ♠ 10 4 ♦ 8 7 5 4 2
♥ A 2 ♣ K 10 4 2

N-S vulnerable, the bidding goes:

North	East	South	West
1♣	1♠	Pass	2♠
Dbl.	Pass	?

What should South bid?

d. ♠ K J 8 3 ♦ Q J 7
♥ 9 6 ♣ 10 8 6 5

e. ♠ 8 7 4 2 ♦ 10
♥ Q 10 7 5 3 2 ♣ K 6

f. ♠ 8 7 6 ♦ J 4 3 2
♥ 9 5 3 ♣ J 10 6

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

a. Two spades. This minimum bid in partner's suit is the most discouraging sound you can make; it shows no points, no distribution, no anything, but it is vital to make this bid rather than pass.

b. Three hearts. You would have to bid two hearts if you had the same sort of hand with no points, so you shouldn't make the same bid on your holding. A key factor in deciding to make this encouraging (but not forcing) jump bid is that if you'd had much more you'd have made a free bid earlier; also, you expect partner to have support for the unbid major—hearts, so your hearts are almost sure to be solidified.

c. Pass. Two factors prompt the decision to convert North's takeout double into a penalty double: (1) with three or more likely tricks in your hand, you can count on beating two clubs; (2) although the combined N-S hands contain plenty of points, you are not sure to make game as you have no major-suit fit. North probably has length in both majors and the fact that you are short will be more of an asset in defence than in attack.

d. Two no trump. In this bidding sequence, partner is expected to be especially strong—about 18 points or the distributional equivalent—since he is asking you to bid at the three-level when you may have little or nothing. Since an 11-trick club contract appears unattractive, you had best suggest no trump, at which your values would seem to be more useful.

e. Four hearts. When partner doubles for takeout, he promises support for the unbid major. This makes you "bad" hand good, so it would be cowardly to bid only three hearts.

f. Three clubs. This time your only ambition is not to be doubled.

Maple Leaf Flag Barred by Law

Canada's new flag cannot be flown over Manitoba schools until the provincial legislature amends the Public Schools Act.

Opposition Liberals have complained at what they consider an affront. Last year the legislature approved the Red Ensign as Manitoba's official flag.

Manitoba

Education Minister Dr. George Johnson has introduced amending legislation and he said a maple leaf flag has been sent to every classroom in the province.

Alberta

Cold Lake Indians of the Chippewa band threaten to keep oil search crews off their reservation because they don't like the decision of the council to put $800,000 earnings in oil leases into a capital fund.

Ralph Ragan, regional supervisor of Indian agencies, told the rebels if the $800,000 was divided among the tribe each member would get no more than $1,000. The earnings from the capital fund would be $30,000 a year and would go towards improving Indian lands, he said.

But Ovide Jocko, spokesman for the insurgent group, said there were nine in his family and he wanted the $9,000 due him. His friends felt the same way.

Coin Collection Raided

An unknown number of coins was taken from the collection of Mrs. Florence Drummond, 1143 Dallas, Friday night.

The thieves punched in a lead pane to open a door to the house and rifled through the collection.

They left by the basement door at the rear of the house.

Mrs. Drummond was away from home.

She told police she heard someone climbing the rear fence when she entered the house.

Tips on Camellias

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

CAMELLIA CULTURE (C.R.W., Victoria)—Camellias like a lime-free sandy loam soil enriched with peat moss or rotted oak leaves, well drained so no puddles stand over the roots in winter, but with enough spongy organic matter to retain moisture through the summer months. A position sheltered from cold winds is good, and I favor a site on the west side of the house where the flower buds, if touched by frost, will be shaded from morning sun and can thaw out slowly.

No formal pruning is required—simply shorten any straggling shoots which are spoiling the symmetry of the plant. This is done in the spring, after blossoming but before new growth starts.

SWEET PEAS (S.Y., Ladysmith)—Sweet peas may be grown on galvanized chicken wire netting as long as the netting has been installed and exposed to the weather for a few months first. Drops of moisture collecting on new galvanized wire may become very acid and injure the vines, but this effect is temporary and disappears after the netting has become weathered and oxidized.

Wire netting is often blamed for poor growth in sweet peas when, in fact, the trouble lies in growing on the same site year after year. Most chicken wire structures are permanent—hen coops, dog runs, tennis enclosures and the like—and sweet peas grown against these are occupying the same soil which gradually becomes "sweet pea sick" from a build-up of disease organisms and certain other factors which affect the health and growth of the plants.

Ideally a sweet pea site should be changed every year, but where this is not possible, change as soon as the plants show signs of decline.

APPLE SCAB SPRAY (E.A.McA., Victoria)—It is quite safe to use a captan spray on your apple trees to control scab, and this spray will not hurt the rows of berry bushes growing between your trees. Spray when the fruit blossom buds are showing their first trace of pink, and at 10-day intervals thereafter until the fruitlets have formed.

I should warn you, though, that captan, while giving excellent control over almost all other fungus organisms, is useless against mildew, and if your trees have suffered from mildew in the past, it would be wise to add karathane or wettable sulphur to the spray, or use a proprietory all-purpose fruit tree spray containing a mildew eradicant.

NEW VEGETABLE PLOT (F.C.M., Royal Oak)—Yes, you can grow the usual vegetables in the former grass plot just dug over this spring. It is almost sure to be short of potash, though, and I would suggest dressing it with sulphate of potash at the rate of 2 ounces per square yard, or wood ashes at the rate of 8 ounces per square yard.

Onions will probably be poor in such a new plot, and carrots and beets not very good, but potatoes, peas, beans, corn and all the leafy crops should do well.

BUTTERFLY BUSH (L.B., Cordova Bay)—The shrub in your garden that produces long lilac-blue blossoms during July and August and which seems to attract numbers of colored butterflies is probably Buddleia variabilis, often known as the Butterfly Bush. Prune now before growth commences, shortening all the new shoots which were produced last year back to within an inch of older wood.

Cinerama Biggest Draw

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Whom do you think is the biggest star in the movies? Elizabeth Taylor? Marlon Brando? Richard Burton? No! The number one box office moneymaker is Cinerama according to a survey by a major theatre chain which will soon be published. The biggest star, the survey will report, is Cinerama, whose mere name on a marquee or in an ad means extra millions at the cash registers.

Tuesday Weld was scared at the last minute and called off her marriage to Nick Venet. Tuesday said it's the closest she's come to taking the final step. To forget the whole thing, she'll go to Europe for talks with top filmmakers, including Federico Fellini.

Pierre Salinger must have loved tasting that acting blood in the Doris Day picture, Do Not Disturb and is now trying to rival Rock Hudson. According to my sources at Metro, Pierre will also do Doris' next movie, The Glass Bottom Boat. Word of advice, Pierre. The camera makes one larger than life, so please, please, go on a diet!

Shirley Jones better tell her income tax man to sharpen his pencil. Her smash night club opening in Houston, Texas, reached all the way to London. She's just received a fantastic offer to play one week at the Palladium. After Houston, Shirley goes to Miami and then opens April 15 at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas. There's even talk she may take the act to the hot spot of the world, Viet Nam.

Everyone's hosting TV shows these days so why not Rex Harrison, a leading contender for Oscar honors for My Fair Lady. He'll take you on a tour of Paris with his wife, Rachel Roberts. The special's being produced by those wonder boys Norman Baer and Phil d'Antoni. I call them "wonder boys" because where movie producers and directors have failed, they nabbed Elizabeth Taylor, Sophia Loren and Melina Mercouri for these tour TV shows. Maybe they should begin to make movies?

You've heard of pie in the sky! Now it's TV in the sky. One of the major airlines has closed with producer Roger Gimbel to screen that marvellous Dean Martin special which was titled All-Time Favorite Songs. Gimbel, by the way, is whipping up a TV special with Gene Kelly called To Ireland With Love.

Elizabeth Taylor visits her father every day at the hospital where he's recovering from a stroke . . . Here's the reason Shirley Maclaine's dropped out of sight. She's spending most of her spare time at her Malibu home burning the midnight typewriter. Shirley's writing a book about her travel adventures around the world. Should be quite a tale.

Director Louis Malle, on location in Mexico filming Viva Maria, discovered that his star Brigitte Bardot was upset because the house she had rented didn't have a pool. So he arranged for her to move into the house next to his and had a hole cut in the fence. This way BB could take a dip anytime she wished. Such gallantry. I wonder if she swims with or without towels.

The obliging stork is waiting for Paul Newman to return from Europe before he delivers Joanne Woodward's baby in mid-April. Joanne's interesting condition is not keeping her from going out in public. She looked sweet and motherly when she appeared in TV's Password show the other night.

Leave it to Peter Ustinov. That genius-of-all trades, who is producing, directing, writing and acting in MGM's Lady L, refuses to let Sophia Loren speak Italian now that they are filming the movie in England. She portrays the lady of an English manor house. Peter has even gone so far as to anglicize her husband's name from Carlo Ponti to "Charley Bridges."

Answer in Tuesday's Colonist

Reporter Tells of Snubs

'Just Don't Have People Of Indian Blood Here'

Mary Backlund

By MARY BACKLUND

I got the impression at a very early age that I was not nearly as "good" as the rest of the people on this earth.

* * *

At the request of the Vancouver Island desk of The Daily Colonist, this newspaper's Galiano Island correspondent, whose great-great-grandmother was an Indian, has written an account of discrimination she has experienced.

I became pretty cynical about it, determining to show them I really could do well.

But without my friends, I could never have learned to tell people about my Indian ancestry.

My great-great-grandad, Henry (Scotty) Georgeson sailed around the Horn in a 100-foot craft from the Shetland Islands more than 100 years ago.

He married an Indian lady up in Lillooet, whom I take after, and later was a lighthousekeeper at Active Pass for many years.

Born on Boat

My dad, Albert Hawthorne, died in 1929 when I was four.

I was born in 1925 on my dad's boat on the way to Ganges on Salt Spring Island. I went to grade school on Galiano to Grade 8.

On my 18th birthday, I was married to Andrew A. Backlund and, before one year was out, in May of 1944, Andrew was killed in a logging accident here on Galiano Island.

New Family

During my school days I had a rather poor time of it until another family of "mixed race" came to school. Then it wasn't so bad.

One of my school friends whom I will always remember as being so very kind to me was Ray Wormald (a former Colonist reporter now an RCN lieutenant-commander in Esquimalt).

On several occasions I tried to get a job in a cafe. Once I even went to Sidney and, as soon as the employer saw me, he said in absolute horror, "Oh, we don't want you!"

Read Books

I am happy to say this hotel has changed hands many times since.

To show "them" I really could do well, I read every book I could get my hands on and watched all the people in authority carefully, to learn the proper manners of these chosen people.

I started joining the little clubs on the island and soon found a willing hand was a welcome hand. So I did my best to help, especially at dances, which I never missed.

Two Jobs

A chance came up to take over the reporting job for the Sidney Review and I jumped at it, soon after becoming the Colonist Galiano reporter, too.

I have met many interesting people.

Once, not long ago, I took a job as housekeeper to a lady in Oak Bay. She said I must eat in the kitchen, but once invited me into the "parlor" to have tea with some of her friends, who were a little taken aback.

To Show

But this old dear wanted to show them a girl from a mixed race could really behave quite nicely.

(I would rather fix a tire.)

I once visited, at her request, a lady in the Shaughnessy district of Vancouver and she told me she would tell all of her friends who asked that I was her "Spanish friend from Mexico."

The reason was, "You just don't have people of Indian blood here."

Helped Me

I have to thank so many wonderful people here on my own island who have helped me in so many ways to get the chip off my shoulder and to look anyone square in the eye and tell them about my Indian parentage.

But how do you tell about the dirty looks, the salesgirl who keeps you waiting unnecessarily, the waitress who waits until the very last to serve you?

When that happens now, I put on a very haughty air and make much noise. This gets results but I would sooner be treated like a real person than apologizing for being alive.

Now Active

I am secretary of the Galiano Club, the oldest organization on the island, secretary of the Gulf Islands Joint Council and on the board of directors of the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau.

This year I will operate the Galiano Lodge Gift Shop for the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Clarke, for the second year.

Moccasins

They have adopted the Indian motif for the whole lodge. We will wear uniforms with a totem pole pattern and maybe even moccasions on our feet and feathers in our hair. The shop will, of course, feature Indian goods.

I must pay special tribute in my climb up the ladder to Tom Carolan of Galiano, who has helped me overcome my inferiority complex and just generally become a better citizen.

He has lived among the Indian people all of his life and knows of so many ways in which they have been wronged it would make your hair curl.

Unusual Projects Wanted

B.C.'s centennial committee is hoping unique projects will be undertaken to celebrate Canada's 100th birthday.

As a result, warns chairman L. J. Wallace, centennial grants will be given only for projects normally not eligible for the usual provincial grants.

In effect, this means there will be no double grants as have been applied for by some of the more than 300 centennial committees in the province.

The committee's decision rules out, for example, senior citizens' housing, nursing homes, chronic care hospitals, schools and regional colleges would be ineligible.

There is a responsibility on the local level, Mr. Wallace pointed out, to assume a share of the cost.

Players Tense In Battle For Bridge Points

By TONY DILLON-DAVIS

The atmosphere was tense and electric in the Empress Hotel ballroom Saturday, as men and women glared at each other across rough tables.

Eyes gleamed redly through clouds of smoke, and the only sound was the slap-slap of pasteboards.

This was the scene when more than 150 bridge players gathered for the Victoria Unit of the American Contract Bridge League's ninth three-day sectional Totem tournament this weekend.

Bridge life masters like Vancouver Alderman Earl Adams and Victoria's Mrs. Ethel Cleworth studied moves by life masters Jack Goldie, Victoria, and Madeline Anderson, Seattle.

Every so often a player looked up with a bleak, ashamed expression on his face, as he remembered an error he had made.

The intruder wandering between rows of tables cringed before baleful glares from players.

Fanatic might be too strong a word to use in describing bridge buffs; dedicated might be a better one.

More than 300 players are expected at the tournament before it ends.

Tournament director Phil Wood of Vancouver said the players converged on Victoria from all points in B.C., Alberta and Washington.

Play began Friday afternoon, with contests for the Sydney Reynolds Ltd. trophy for ladies' pairs, and the W. and J. Wilson Ltd. trophy for men's pairs.

Saturday's play was for the Henry Birks and Sons Ltd. trophy for open pairs and the tourney will wind up today with play for the Berman Memorial trophy for teams of four.

The Madeline Anderson trophy will go to the Victoria unit member gaining the most master points in the tourney.

Air Force Quintet Promoted

COMOX—Five NCOs at this RCAF station learned Saturday of their promotions to commissioned ranks.

The five, who will become flying officers Thursday, are Flt. Sgt. D. J. Webb, an armament superintendent; Flt. Sgt. G. S. Ferris, a fire fighter; Sgts. R. M. McPhail and R. A. Grant, armaments system technicians, and Cpl. D. T. M. Gardner of the mobile equipment section.

Mini-Metro Initiative Left With Municipality

Saanich Councillor Leslie Passmore believes Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell will leave mini-metro initiative with individual municipalities.

"I can hardly imagine him forcing the municipalities into regional services." Coun. Passmore remarked Saturday night.

Several municipal officials have expressed fears that the government's new mini-metro legislation gives Mr. Campbell the power to force communities to participate in regional services against their will.

An amendment permits municipalities to hold referendums to determine whether ratepayers want to enter mini-metro.

Erhard Stakes Government's Life

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Erhard risked collapse of his coalition government Saturday by appointing a member of his own Christian Democratic party as West Germany's new justice minister.

He picked Karl Weber, 67, a relatively unknown Bundestag (parliamentary) delegate, to succeed Free Democrat Ewald Bucher. Bucher, a former Nazi, quit Thursday after parliament overrode him and voted to continue the hunt for Nazi murderers five more years.

Bucher had wanted the hunt stopped this year. His Free Democratic Party, the smaller member of the coalition, backed him 100 per cent. It demanded that the justice ministry position be left unfilled until after the Sept. 19 parliamentary election, in order to keep attention focused on the issue.

The Free Democrats hold the balance of power in the present parliament but indications are that they face serious losses and possible extinction in the election. They think they have found a way to make a come-back by advocating an end to new prosecutions of war crimes. Polls show the West German people are against these reminders of the ugly past.

The chancellor, with his political life at stake in the election, was not ready to humor another party on a vote-getting issue with these possibilities.

The Free Democrats called a meeting of their leaders for Wednesday to decide whether to break up the coalition. A party spokesman told a press conference he did not foresee any developments that would lead to the other four Free Democratic ministers resigning but warned there could be no certainty until Wednesday.

For Erhard the loss of the Free Democrats would be serious, but not necessarily fatal.

Temporary Patch For Jonquiere

The Esquimalt-based ocean escort HMCS Jonquiere is undergoing temporary repairs to her bow in San Francisco.

The Jonquiere plowed into Pier 1 at the Ferry Building as she was docking Friday for a weekend visit.

None of the 140 officers and men aboard was injured in the crash, which tore a hole in the ship's bow.

Early reports said damage to ship and wharf pilings totalled $25,000.

Naval spokesmen at Esquimalt said Saturday the matter was still under investigation, and no damage estimates would be released until Monday.

Dr. O. E. Ault, Canadian consul-general, said Saturday the Jonquiere would be given temporary repairs in San Francisco.

Wilson Threatens House of Lords

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters)—Prime Minister Wilson warned Saturday that if the House of Lords opposes "government business" he would seek a mandate at the next general election to end their power to block legislation passed by the House of Commons.

Wilson told a local Labor party conference:

"Their lordships have already taken the bit between their teeth with anti-government votes on various issues," he said.

NO TROUBLE YET

"So far none of these has amounted to more than an expression of their peculiar aristocratic opinions."

Wilson said if the opposition Conservatives used the House of Lords as a means of frustrating or holding up government business he would reserve the right to seek an electoral mandate to amend the Parliamentary Act.

Wilson said Labor did not plan an early general election.

But, he added, the government would not hesitate to go to the country if "factious opposition" made it impossible to get its program through.

EASTBOURNE, England (AP)—With flames gushing out of his ship after a collision, Capt. Seven of his crew fought the fire as his ship was being towed toward the Isle of Wight.

FBI Tried Bribery Says Klan

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Ku Klux Klan leaders Saturday angrily accused the FBI of trying to bribe one of four Klansmen charged with conspiracy in the night-rider killing of a white housewife who joined a civil rights march to the capitol.

The charge was coupled with new criticism of President Johnson's stinging verbal attack on the robed order when he disclosed the arrests Friday.

State agents worked toward possible murder charges in the Thursday night shooting death of Viola Gregg Liuzzo, 39, of Detroit. About 200 demonstrators led by a minister from Toronto marched at Selma in protest of the murder.

580 ACRES

Klan lawyer Matt H. Murphy Jr., retained by the Klan to defend the men, said at a press conference in Birmingham the FBI offered 580 acres of land in Minnesota to Gary Tommy Rowe Jr., 34, for information about the murder. Rowe is one of the four arrested.

Murphy said the federal government is trying to make Rowe "frame the imperial Wizard of the KKK and trying to make him break the Klan's back."

NO COMMENT

FBI agent Everett Ingram of the Birmingham office declined comment. A justice department spokesman in Washington said the proper forum for comment "is in court."

Murphy said his clients are innocent.

Robert M. Shelton Jr., of Tuscaloosa, imperial wizard of the United Klans, said the Klan put up $150,000 bonds for three of the men—including Rowe. The fourth was denied bail.

'Minister Dying Anyway'

BOSTON (UPI)—The Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan said Saturday in Birmingham, Ala., that Rev. James Reeb of Boston was dying of cancer before he was clubbed to death in Selma earlier this month. Robert Shelton said the minister "would have lived a very short time even if he had been given good medical attention following the alleged beating."

In Boston, John Sullivan, New England chairman of the American Friends Service Committee, replied that Mr. Reeb had undergone a physical examination late last year and was "in the pink of health."

At Easter Recess

Pearson May Visit Troops in Cyprus

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson hopes to visit Canadians serving with United Nations forces on Cyprus and the Gaza Strip during Parliament's Easter recess, he announced at a banquet here.

He said he may also visit Canadian NATO bases at Marville, France, and Soest, Germany.

Mr. Pearson emphasized however, that the trip was tentative because he is uncertain whether the recess will be long enough to allow him the necessary 10 days out of the country.

In Nicosia, reports of the projected visit appeared in the Greek-Cypriot press, saying the trip would be an extension of a visit to Second World War graves at Salonika in Greece.

Well-informed sources said the trip would probably be of an unofficial nature—that is, Mr. Pearson would not attempt anything more than the briefest courtesy meeting with Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, and Dr. Fazil Kuchuk, vice-president and leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community.

They said if the trip materialized, it would likely involve only a one-day visit.

A family of nine fled to safety Saturday afternoon after fire ripped through the front of their large wooden home.

Two children playing with matches under the front porch of the house at 1611 Pembroke were blamed for the blaze, which firemen estimated caused $5,000 damage.

Hubert DeForge, a 24-year-old VMD worker, his wife Beverly, their five children ranging in age from two months to six years, Mrs. DeForge's mother, Mrs. Theresa Palmer, and Mr. DeForge's grandfather, 81-year-old Joseph Lecroix, all had to flee the house.

DOZEN FIREMEN

A dozen firemen and two trucks from the city's two halls were called in to fight the blaze shortly after 4:30 p.m.

By the time they arrived, as one fireman put it: "It was going like hell" over the front of the old shingle-sided house.

TOOK AN HOUR

It took about an hour to quell the blaze as firemen had to chop through the front part of the roof to get at tiny stubborn pockets of flame.

Mr. DeForge said he was upstairs talking to his grandfather when Mrs. Palmer shouted that the house was on fire.

Mrs. DeForge and her mother hustled the children out of the house while Mr. DeForge helped the grandfather.

CEILING COLLAPSED

Later Mr. DeForge said that apart from being slightly upset, no one was injured, although he suffered slight burns when the basement ceiling collapsed while he was di-

Big Three Balance

China Brings U.S., Russia Together

WICHITA, Kan. (CP) — The emergence of China as a world power could mean the end of the cold war between Russia and the United States, Alvin Hamilton said here Saturday.

The Conservative MP for Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, told the annual Kansas Institute of International Relations that with three major powers in the world, it would seem "the strategy of each of the big powers would be to play 'odd-man out'."

"Could it be that Russia is trying to disentangle itself from its confrontation with the U.S.? Could it be that China is trying to keep Russia and the U.S. entangled?"

He said that looking at the histories of the three powers, and recognizing all three were nationalistically inclined, it was a case of "which two nations have the greatest basic reasons for confrontation?"

He said on his trip to China in 1960 as Canadian agriculture minister to help negotiate wheat sales, he found that Chinese politicians were "very sensitive" to public opinion.

China was over the crop difficulties of 1959-61, yet they still bought Canadian wheat "to mix with theirs to make better bread."

"A consumer demand had developed which the government heeded."

This was likely the same reason that Russia purchased Western wheat in 1963.

"Possibly consumer demand for the better life is the new positive factor for peace in the world today."

Although Canada and the U.S. share the same reaction to events because of geography, "we still have a Canadian view."

"Canadians want to talk trade with the Chinese. We hope that some day the Americans will want to trade with them, too."

He said from the point of view of the world, "most of us hope that China will come into the UN" and be recognized by all nations.

"We had the experience of turning our backs on Japan in 1922. Many men paid a heavy price for the clash that that move made inevitable.

"Let us learn the lesson."

But Which One?

Leafs Capture Playoff Spot

By JIM TANG

Victoria's unpredictable Maple Leafs not only won themselves a spot in the Western Hockey League finals by dumping Vancouver Canucks, 5-3, at Memorial Arena last night but they earned a chance to finish third when they end their scheduled season in Vancouver this afternoon.

Victory for the Leafs this afternoon would leave the two clubs with 68 points each. In that event, the higher position will be awarded to the club with the most victories and—it sort of sneaked up on everyone—the Leafs already have won 32 games to 31 for the Canucks.

On the result of the game will hang the decision on semi-final opponents. The third-place club gets the league-champion Portland Buckaroos and the fourth-place club tangles with the second-place Seattle Totems in the other best-of-seven set.

Left out of things by last night's development at Memorial Arena were the playoff champions of last season, San Francisco Seals. They did what they could by winning their last two games but it was too little too late.

Victoria coach Rudy Pilous, bothered and bewildered as he sweated out the last weeks of the season, had his Mr. Hydes out for the 4,144 fans who showed up to lend their support.

The Leafs who just couldn't find their skating legs in Seattle on Friday night in getting outplayed by the Totems, were hard to find. Instead, Pilous had, as he has had when it really counted, a determined, hard-skating crew which clearly earned the points in what was the clutch game of the season.

Had the Leafs lost, they would have had to gain at least one point in Vancouver today to avoid a special playoff with the Seals for fourth place. And it is quite common knowledge that Victoria has lost seven out of seven there this season.

Los Angeles	70	[illegible]	41	3	217	[illegible]	[illegible]

Last night's scores: Vancouver 3 at VICTORIA 5; Portland 4 at Seattle 2; San Francisco 4 at Los Angeles 2.

Final games: today—VICTORIA at Vancouver; Seattle at Portland.

Leafs made certain of avoiding it by winning their sixth in a row over Canucks on Memorial Arena ice, and they did it rather impressively after being set back after only 30 seconds by Canucks' first goal.

PERFECT PLAY

It was, naturally, set up by Billy McNeill, who got a sudden break at centre ice and made the perfect play as his wingers came up fast on either side. Howie Hughes drilling one past Al Millar.

Claude Labrosse got it back two minutes later with a slap shot from just inside the blueline after Milan Marcetta had won a draw in the Vancouver end.

Except for getting a bit careless when they got themselves two three-goal leads in the first period, the Leafs were in command from there.

They were moving the puck, forcing the play and booming shots at Gilles Villemure. Their forcing tactics brought Vancouver penalties, which in turn brought them their next two goals, and their hard shooting three times caused the game to be stopped while Villemure got minor repairs.

ROOKIE PLAYS

The third time, Villemure had to leave with what was reported to be strained knee ligaments and rookie Barry Brown, with the New Westminster junior Royals last season and the previous season, played the last 16 minutes and 44 seconds.

Fred Hucul, who had another of his good games, tied it up with a smoking point shot while Canucks played two men short near the end of the first period. And it was Hucul's iced shot which Danny Belisle turned in for the 3-1 goal in the second period with Larry Cahan serving time for some centre-ice slashing.

NINTH SCORE

It was Belisle's ninth goal against his ex-teammates this season.

It was still 3-1 when Villemure left the game, and it took more than three minutes before Leafs could test Brown.

Lou Jankowski got the first chance, hooking the puck backhanded during a mix-up about 15 feet in front of the Vancouver goal to leave Brown no chance.

That should have been enough but Cahan's point shot just over a minute later deflected off Buddy Boone's skates for a lucky goal and there was cause for worry when Steve Witiuk got a penalty.

But Larry Keenan and Gordie Redahl, forechecking in the Vancouver zone, got the puck away from Dunc McCallum and Redahl fired it in to restore the three-goal margin. Boone got one back when the Leafs got careless about their checking but they tightened up again to look safe the rest of the distance.

Seals Fight To Finish

San Francisco Seals defeated Los Angeles Blades, 4-2, at Los Angeles last night to wind up the Western Hockey League season for both clubs.

League champion Portland Buckaroos defeated Seattle Totems, 4-2, in another game, with Seattle's Guyle Fielder scoring a pair of goals and taking over the individual point-getting lead from Portland's Art Jones, 99-98.

In team competition, Vancouver edged University of Victoria for senior laurels while Steveston won the junior crown.

H. Palm of Hastings was grand champion of the non-black belt competition, defeating U. Wetner, Vancouver, in the over 160-pound final. L. Read, Victoria, beat T. Swan, Nanaimo, in the under 160-pound competition.

Crozier Close to Vezina Trophy Win

National Hockey League champion Detroit Red Wings provided their goalkeeper, rookie, Roger Crozier, with a good grip on the Vezina Trophy as they bombed Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1, before 14,703 Toronto fans last night.

Result gives Crozier a two-goal lead over the Toronto duo of Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk and the Chicago twosome of Glenn Hall and Denis DeJordy in the battle for the trophy, awarded annually to the goalkeeper playing the most games for the team allowing the fewest goals during the regular season.

Possession of the trophy will be settled tonight as the season ends. Wings play host to the Maple Leafs in Detroit while Chicago visits Boston to play the last-place Bruins, who whomped Montreal Canadiens, 6-2, in another game last night.

Crozier has allowed 171 goals in 69 games while the Toronto and Chicago combinations have each allowed 173 in the same number of games.

Leafs afforded Bower little protection throughout the game and the veteran came up with a stro performance to limit the fast-stepping Wings to four goals.

Pit Martin, Eddie Joyal and Paul Henderson each contributed his eighth goal of the season for Winds while Normie Ullman bagged his 42nd, tops in the league.

Ullman now has 83 points, four fewer than Chicago's Stan Mikita, the league's top point-getter.

Ron Ellis, Crozier's main competition in the voting for the Calder Trophy, awarded annually to the league's top rookie, scored the only Toronto goal, his 23rd of the season.

Last night's scores: Detroit 4 at Toronto 1; Boston 6 at Montreal 2.

Next games: tonight—Toronto at Detroit; Montreal at New York; Chicago at Boston.

FINE EFFORT

At Montreal, Bruins' goalkeeper Jack Norris turned in an exceptional effort as Boston gained only its third win of the season against Canadiens. Montreal won 10 games and tied another.

Norris wound up with 33 saves, at least a third of them fine efforts, as Bruins won their first game in seven Montreal visits.

A Forum crowd of 14,234 at times jeered Canadiens for their inept play in the second period but it amounted to a nothing game for both teams.

Montreal coach Toe Blake, using the game to experiment, split the game equally between his two goalies, Charlie Hodge and Lorne "Gump" Worsley. Each gave up three goals.

Boston scoring was shared by Don Awrey, Ted Green, Tom Williams, Wayne Maxner, Johnny Bucyk and Orland Kurtenbach while Jean Beliveau and Henri Richard scored for Canadiens.

Junior Lessons in April

Golf School Switched

The venue of the Victoria District junior golf school to take place during the Easter holidays has been changed from Gorge Vale Golf Club to Douglas Golflands.

The change was recommended by the local golf professional committee which will give the lessons.

Joe Pryke, chairman of the pros committee, and professional at Gorge Vale said that his committee had decided that the Golflands provided wider facilities for running a series of golf lessons for a large number of young people than existed at Gorge.

"There are fine facilities at Golfland," said Mr. Pryke, "And in addition there will be an ample supply of golf balls available for practice . . ."

Mr. Pryke added that in addition to providing many teeing grounds, Golflands had a par three golf course which would be used by the teaching staff for instruction in short iron play and putting.

In view of the recommendation of the professionals, the Victoria District Committee agreed to make the change.

Golflands is within easy reach of B.C. Hydro's Carey (No. 19) bus service.

Only a limited number of applications can be taken, and young golfers should take advantage of the application form in today's issue if they wish to take part.

There is a registration fee of $2 and the school will be in session on April 20, 21 and 22 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Boys and girls, over 12 and under 19 are eligible. The course is aimed to provide a beginners' introduction to golf and the basic principles of swinging and hitting the ball.

Twin Double Pays $125,000

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The longest-priced horse in the race, Ampose ($38.40), scored a startling upset in the $111,800 Gulfstream Handicap Saturday, and two New Jersey brothers held a twin double ticket on him worth $124,972.

It was the single most valuable ticket ever bought at an American thoroughbred track.

Another longshot, Tronado, finished second while the favored Gun Bow was third and the once-great Candy Spots was dead last by five lengths.

"Give me a receipt."

They wouldn't talk about their betting methods although a friend described them as heavy bettors.

Besides Ampose, the other long shots they picked were: Tim's Lady, $78.60, in the fifth, Chairmans Choice, $16.40, in the sixth and Dummy, $30.40, in the eighth.

In the Gulfstream Handicap, Babington, an entry with Tronado, was fourth followed by Hot Dust, Your Alibhai, Lt. Stevens and Candy Spots.

Canopy, Pilot—It's Time to Go!

Mrs. Ruth McKellar, Comox Valley correspondent for The Daily Colonist, recently accepted an invitation to fly in an RCAF T-33 jet. This first of two articles tells of her training; the second telling of the flight will be published in the Colonist Tuesday.

By RUTH McKELLAR

The RCAF Dakota bound for Cold Lake, Alta., contained a crew of six, seven RCAF personnel and a civilian woman—me.

Two months before, press representatives had been invited to a trip aboard the newly-arrived Voyageur helicopter at RCAF Station Comox.

A young and eager public relations officer with the Voyageur's 121 Search and Rescue Unit, FO Robbie Ross, asked about my interest in a T-33 jet flight.

My immediate affirmative answer may have surprised him but, when I finally learned what the trip involved, I was the surprised one.

The average commercial jet flight is merely a matter of buying a ticket and getting aboard. To fly in an RCAF aircraft is only slightly more difficult.

To fly in the T-bird started a long, involved procedure which now saw me on my way to Cold Lake for high-altitude indoctrination.

Permission for the flight from Defence Minister Hellyer was probably the easiest part. There were forms to be filled out and releases to be obtained.

Now, I thought in my ignorance, I'm ready for the flight. A flight I was about to have, but not the one I had in mind. Cold Lake came first.

Aboard the Dakota the phrases were explosive decompression, ejection mechanism and oxygen apparatus. Apprehension set in.

It was more than 2½ months from the time I had eagerly said "yes" when we left our quarters at bright, sunny Cold Lake for the lecture room. The first step was fitted headgear, which contained an ear-set for intercommunication, and an oxygen mask.

The first lecture dealt with hypoxia, lack of oxygen, and hyperventilation, breathing too deeply and too rapidly, in effect letting the brain get too much oxygen. The mask had to be adjusted to avoid any air leak around the face.

Next lecture: seat mechanism and how to eject.

The ejection procedure is not difficult but important things must be remembered, the most important being instant reaction to the pilot command, "Eject, eject!"

Failure to act, taking time to think, could kill the passenger and possibly the pilot.

As the instructor remarked, "When you see the canopy and the pilot go past you, it's time to go, man."

Medical officers lectured on ears, throat, sinuses and other areas of the body likely to be affected by the fast rate of ascent and descent. Then came the forbidding-looking decompression chamber.

First we adjusted our oxygen masks and filed in, looking more like a line of criminals walking the last mile. Each was assigned a numbered seat and lost identity, becoming a number to the instructor outside—if he wished to speak to us.

Through the intercom we heard, "We will now take you up to 10,000 feet and level off."

Then, "We are now at 10,000 feet. Are there any problems?"

There was—one man had to leave with a bleeding nose. I sighed with relief; at least if I couldn't take the course, I would not be the first to leave.

We continued to ascend at the rate of 5,000 feet per second to 30,000 feet, levelled off, then proceeded to 35,000 to allow the experience of breathing under pressure.

Here we saw an example of hypoxia.

One gallant man took off his oxygen mask and was asked to write down some figures, then add them up. The picture of the man slowly passing into unconsciousness and struggling to do as he was told was funny, but actually was in deadly earnest as we saw the terrible effect of lack of oxygen.

He told the class later everyone appeared blurred and, while he struggled to carry out the orders, he was so tired he could hardly raise his hand or hold the pencil. He had a sensation of being in a state of suspended animation.

I felt no sensation at all and had experienced no pain of any kind, but now we were to descend to ground level.

The doctor told us to remember to keep moving our jaws by chewing and yawning to prevent pressure building up in the ears. If this didn't work, we had learned to loosen the oxygen mask, hold the nose firmly and breathe out as hard as possible.

Some did this, but in the main we descended to ground level with little or no difficulty.

Final step was the explosive decompression; which was over before we knew what had happened.

Everyone entered a smaller decompression chamber where the pressure was equal to that of the inside of the T-bird. Suddenly, a tremendous bang, which scared us out of half a year's growth.

We learned we had been technically ejected from a plane and the bang was what we heard as we entered the atmosphere outside the plane at 30,000 feet or more.

As we filed out, each received a small blue card certifying we had passed high-altitude indoctrination.

All that remained was the trip back to Comox and, for me, the day I would finally fly in a T-33. I was just a little proud to be the only civilian woman to pass the course.

Warning Becomes Real

Dog Catches Deer Near Club Official

COURTENAY — No sooner had the Cumberland Rod and Gun Club demanded action against dogs chasing deer than the club president happened on the scene of just such an occasion.

William Moncrief said Friday he saw a large dog pull down a deer in front of a group of workmen on a main Comox Valley road.

His club announced a week before it would seek a Game Act change to allow conservation officers to shoot dogs caught in the act of killing deer.

Mr. Moncrief said Friday the dog problem is general from Union Bay to Seal Bay, where deer are being driven into the water, and is a "very serious" matter at this time of year.

He said owners of German shepherds, Labradors and even some smaller dogs "must realize what they can do to a yearling deer or a doe heavy with young."

60 DEER KILLED

Mr. Moncrief said a reliable estimate is that about 60 deer have been destroyed by dogs in the Comox Valley.

Merely urging owners of pets to see they don't run wild seems to have little effect. One answer from owners is to let the game officer look into it, but Mr. Moncrief said the officer is powerless to act under the present law.

NO ACTION POSSIBLE

If a dog killed a deer in front of the officer he could not take any action except to attempt to catch the dog, a highly unlikely possibility, and notify the owner.

Mr. Moncrief said he realized many might think his actions harsh but, "if a dog is running deer, it is better off put away and I sincerely hope other fish and game clubs will lend their support."

Cancer Goal $5,000 In Nanaimo

NANAIMO — The Canadian Cancer Society's annual educational and fund-raising campaign will be launched here Thursday with a target of $5,000 as part of the B.C.-Yukon drive for $375,000.

Mrs. Jean Darwin, Nanaimo unit president, said Saturday the funds will aid a stepped-up education program aimed at both prevention and early detection of cancer.

"From many angles we are gradually backing cancer into a corner," she said. "To slow down now would be unthinkable."

Indian Rights Upheld In Norris Judgment

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, in a massive judgement embracing the history and law surrounding Indian rights, has supported the decision of other B.C. appeal court judges that B.C. Indians still have the ancestral right to hunt and fish for food on unoccupied lands out of season.

Mr. Justice Norris, who wrote an exhaustive and far-reaching report on Great Lakes shipping which resulted in appointment of the federal maritime commission, disclosed Friday a 53-page judgement in the Indian case.

Clifford White and David Bob of the Nanaimo Indian band shot deer out of season to feed their families. They were charged under the B.C. game laws and convicted by Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts but had the decision reversed in county court.

COURT OF APPEAL

The provincial government took the issue to the B.C. court of appeal because it involved a constitutional issue. The court of appeal unanimously upheld the Indians' rights.

Four judges handed down their reasons at the time but Mr. Justice Norris, while concurring in their findings, chose to do some beyond-the-call-of-duty research in Indian rights.

The case is expected to be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada by the provincial government and Mr. Justice Norris' extensive findings may well play a part there.

The main point of his findings is that a royal proclamation of 1763, giving Indians in the then-known parts of the west coast of North America their hunting and fishing rights, did apply to west coast Indians and a subsequent treaty reinforcing these rights could not be touched by B.C. law.

Provincial government lawyers have argued the royal proclamation could not apply to Island Indians because these Indians were not even known to the British at the time.

Alberni Health Unit

'Never Expected' Such Help Kinsmen Tell Union Locals

PORT ALBERNI—"It makes one glad to belong to the Alberni Valley," Kinsmen health unit committee chairman Ted Okrainetz said Saturday. "You'll never find more generous people anywhere."

He spoke after representatives of unions affiliated with the Port Alberni and District Labor Council disclosed donations totalling $2,758 toward the Kinsmen fund to complete construction of the Alberni health unit.

CHEQUES PRESENTED

Four other labor organizations added another $575 for a total of $3,333.

Cheques for most of the donations were presented to committee treasurer Robert Smith following a noon luncheon Saturday in the Arlington Hotel.

"We never expected anything like this," said Mr. Okrainetz.

ALSO SURPRISED

Labor council president Dan Connell said his executive was also surprised at the response and added, "We are very proud of the contributions made by the workers of the valley."

The IWA Local 1-85 cheque for $1,580 was presented by president Walter Allen while Jack Whittall gave $655 on behalf of the pulp-sulphite Local 592.

PAPER LOCAL

A cheque for $231 from the paper maker and paper workers union Tyee Local 686 was given by James Jensen and Archie Cardinal added $25 from the office workers union.

James Trebett handed over a $135 cheque from the carpenters' Local 513, Ralph Watson gave $32 for the beverage dispensers' union and Jack Naylor presented a $180 cheque from the longshore local.

Other contributions were $500 from the Alply social services division and $25 each from the school employees division Local 727 of the Canadian Public Employees Union, the district civic employees Local 118 and the labor council.

Kinsmen president William Burgoyne said the health unit is more than 50 per cent complete and the aim is to reach 75 per cent by May so government grants can be obtained from monies set aside for the current fiscal year.

OTHER DONATIONS

Ottawa has already sent $9,000, the Canadian Mental Health Association has given $2,000 and donations from various organizations and Kinsmen have put the club within $5,000 of the objective.

Mr. Okrainetz said the main purpose of the building is to serve public health needs of Alberni and rural areas, including the west coast.

But the Central Island health unit may be split, with Alberni becoming headquarters for the western area and a medical director in charge here.

Theft in Beverage Room Costs Nine Months in Jail

COURTENAY — City resident William Donald Clouter was sentenced in magistrate's court Friday to nine months in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of money under $50.

The charge followed an incident in a beverage room when a woman left her table for a few minutes. On her return, she saw Clouter take something from her purse and then leave.

Clouter told the court he did not remember doing it as he was too drunk to remember.

Police said Clouter had five previous convictions in Canada and the U.S. for theft, one for breaking and entering, one for false pretences and one for assault.

Old Hospital Society Possible in Nanaimo

NANAIMO—An "old Nanaimo hospital society" could result from a scheme by the newly formed Nanaimo and District Health Council to use part of the old Kennedy Street hospital as a workshop for the handicapped.

Council president Fred Spencer and vice-president Frank Anzik disclosed after a meeting Friday a committee is studying the feasibility of such a workshop.

The fate of the building, whose demolition was approved and later dropped, has been a subject of controversy for years.

Mr. Anzik said that, if enough service clubs and other organizations joined to finance installation of a new heating system in the hospital, there would be enough space for the handicapped centre and each organization.

"If people want to save the old building, here is a chance to come forward," he said. "It would take organizing and a lot of work but it could be done."

Mr. Anzik said he and Mr. Spencer found the hospital in good condition though not up to date and definitely needing a new heating system. He suggested part of it could be remodelled by a volunteer work force.

The health council is starting a membership drive and any organization wishing further information should contact Mr. Spencer or Mr. Anzik.

Mr. Anzik said that, if enough people indicate interest, a public meeting will be called.

New Fire Tricks Hard for Loggers

Older loggers on Vancouver Island are finding new fire prevention tricks hard to learn.

A group of federal forest fire research officials from across Canada learned this during a conference in Victoria last week.

Wednesday 18 officials, including two from B.C. forest service protection division, visited MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River's Copper Canyon camp, where they were shown the operation by logging boss Nit Clarke.

The officials found most of the 120 men in the crew at Cowichan district camp have minimum seniority of 12 years.

While this makes for a stable operation, officials were told many of the loggers learned to rate hazard and fire conditions without much research aid.

They found there is a reluctance for some of the older loggers to change from what they know to be a tried and practical measure of fire danger.

A light fall of wet snow covered the mountains and touched lightly on the lowlands down to the waterfront Thursday morning, but it had just about gone by 9:30 a.m. The last two week's frost has spoiled many spring flowers and discouraged gardeners but Mrs. V. McClaron says five swallows arrived Tuesday, so spring must be just around the corner.

Fulford Man On Ball

Birthday No. 90 Striking Affair

Story and pictures by BEA HAMILTON

FULFORD—W. E. Taylor, who lives beside the sea on Isabella Point Road, proved on his recent 90th birthday he's on the ball in more ways than one.

Mr. Taylor, in Victoria with his wife for the occasion, celebrated by going to a bowling alley for a game and making the first strike of his life.

In fact, he made eight strikes before the afternoon was over.

A party of 14 or so helped Mr. Taylor enjoy the two hours of bowling, his first in many years.

Another birthday treat was the news that the Taylors' grandson, 14-year-old Terry Renner, has been accepted by the British Dalgleish ship line.

He has signed on as an apprentice deck officer aboard MV Warkworth and will serve four years, after which he will write for his second mate's ticket.

As for Mr. Taylor, he's already looking forward to his 91st birthday party.

He says he wants another bowling party and will "knock 'em in the alley again!"

Mrs. Taylor reported a tea party followed the bowling affair. The feature was a birthday cake which carried one candle.

Albernis Park

Sports Fan Reid Kicks Off

PORT ALBERNI — Hughie Reid, longtime sports fan and supporter of youth activities, was given the honor Saturday of kicking the first soccer ball at the new Tenth Avenue Park.

His kickoff followed a 15-minute official opening presided over by parks and recreation commission chairman Ald. Garnet Reynolds.

Young soccer players were soon in action on the two pitches which, with baseball diamonds and a fieldhouse, are the keys to the $60,000 development.

The fieldhouse was open to public inspection. It contains living quarters for the caretaker as well as change rooms and showers for the players.

FOUR SPEAKERS

Speakers included Port Mayor Hammer, Alberni Mayor Bishop, commission soccer club representative Cliff Hoskins and director Duncan Russell.

Mayor Hammer, who noted Saturday was the first anniversary of the tidal wave, said the park was the first major work of the commission which, he hoped, would go on to "far greater things in planning for the whole valley."

Hundreds to Attend Annual Reunion

LADIES of the LEGION

On the first Thursday evening of every month, except in summer, the auditorium of Britannia Branch Legion is the scene of activity as 50 or more women gather. It may be raining, or snowing and bitterly cold outside, but inside the hall there's always warmth, good humor and comradeship among members of the Ex-Servicewomen's Branch No. 182 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

by MILLICENT LINDO

This group is unique in that it is the only chartered branch of ex-servicewomen west of the Rockies, and one of six across Canada. Its membership comprises veterans of two World Wars in one of the three services.

They are a self-effacing group, with a common interest, and a common purpose—bent on service to humanity, and banded together for a lasting peace. Their role in the community is not fully recognized, and they are often confused with ladies' auxiliaries to Legion branches. This is due to the fact that the auxiliaries wear the same uniform—the navy blue blazer, grey skirt, and navy beret, but the insignia on the beret is different.

The women of Legion Branch No. 182 are those who in emergency have driven lorries, plotted courses of enemy ships and planes, nursed the wounded and the dying in foreign lands, and even manned guns. Many witnessed the horrors of war, and endured its hardships.

Then the day came when the sun shone. It was all over. They were de-activated and returned to their homes, their typewriters, their places in society, and to the job of raising families. But although they doffed their uniforms yet they have never forgotten their comrades. Memories of the war and its aftermath are with them still. Today, as ever, they are interested in the plight of those who returned with injuries. Primarily their efforts are directed at obtaining better conditions for veterans, or their widows and dependants. Their constant endeavor is to bring some ray of comfort and happiness into the lives of hospitalized service personnel.

But their activities are not confined to the one cause. They are willing to become identified with any charitable effort in which they can serve to advantage.

The intriguing history of Canadian ex-servicewomen, and the manner in which they made their debut on a large scale into a field hitherto monopolized by men, dates back to the early part of this century when training schools for nursing sisters were already established in Canada.

By 1914 when war with Germany was imminent, there was a reserve nucleus of five nursing sisters to whom the military offered a course at the Garrison Hospital at Halifax. One of the five, Nurse Margaret McDonald, asked to be sent to England to receive a thorough training in military work, methods of organization, mobilization and administration. She was given the opportunity of visiting the Imperial Military Hospital through the efforts of Miss (afterwards Dame) Maud McCarthy. Later she served under her as matron-in-chief Q.A.I.M.N.S. in France.

Inspired by the initiative and success of Miss McDonald, other nurses followed her into the field. By 1917 the government had enlisted 2,003 Canadian-trained nurses with 77 matrons, and a reserve of 203 for special hospital services. From then on the voluntary supply of trained nurses was at all times far in excess of demand.

Among the first batch of nursing sisters who went overseas was Miss Vivian Tremaine—an outstanding woman who later brought fame to Canada. She was given the appointment of sister-in-charge of No. 1 Canada Casualty Clearing Station at Fort Gassion Aix-Sur-Lys. One day while stationed there she was called off duty by General W. G. McPherson, and told to travel to Chateau Quenelles to assist in nursing a private patient. This turned out to be His Majesty King George V whose horse had reared and fallen upon him while he was reviewing Canadian troops.

Miss Tremaine went by train to Bologne, and embarked on His Majesty's ship Anglia, and then by ambulance to Buckingham Palace. There she met Queen Mary, Edward, Prince of Wales, and other members of the royal family, and she spent six weeks nursing her royal patient.

The king was so pleased that he sent a cable to his uncle in Canada—the Duke of Connaught—informing him of all the wonderful things that Canadians had done for them. Along with a Sister Ward, the king presented the decoration of the Victoria Order Silver Medal to Sister Tremaine. As a personal expression of his gratitude King George also gave her a brooch designed with a "G" and a "V" (Royal Cipher) in gold and red enamel with a crown above.

The long list of medals and decorations that Canadian Nursing Sisters of the First World War received reflects the appreciation for their unselfish service.

History of the women of the Second World War, although not quite as romantic, is equally colorful. With the outbreak there was a new departure in the recruitment of women. From 1941 onwards all the armed forces organized women's services. Of the 1,086,771 Canadians who wore uniforms about 49,252 were women. But in the early years of the war and for a long period, overseas service for them was on a strictly voluntary basis. As a result several Canadian women paid their own expenses and joined the Auxiliary Territorial Services in Britain. It was then that the Canadian government decided to form the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

The primary role of this corps was to replace army personnel in non-combatant activities. In addition the corps was to make available trained, efficient, and disciplined female personnel for duty in various branches of public service and to replace category A and B soldiers who were employed in administrative and maintenance duties within the army, and those who were required for duty in field formations, to fill the ever-growing need for reinforcements to build up Canada's overseas force.

This women's corps was formed on a strictly military basis, but not within the army originally. Officers carried similar titles to those in the British Auxiliary Territorial Service. They wore specially designed rank badges to designate the corps as a separate entity. On March 13, 1942, this corps became a part of the Active Militia of Canada. Its officers were commissioned and took army titles and rank badges, and became closely integrated into the army. Training centres for these women were opened at St. Anne de Bellevue, Quebec; at Vermilion, Alberta, and Kitchener, Ontario.

First contingent of 100 left for overseas in November, 1942. Other drafts followed until June, 1945, when the largest contingent sailed—making a total of over 2,000. Some worked in leave centres, army HQ, and other formations. They were considered one of the smartest-looking corps of women anywhere. No soldier has ever been prouder of his corps than were the CWAC volunteers.

Once hostilities were over, and they returned to civvy street, many of them joined hands with women of other units and became members of the Legion at Britannia branch. Within a short time their numbers increased until it was felt that there were enough women to form a branch of their own. The Legion constitution called for a membership of 25, so a meeting was called and all ex-servicewomen in the area were invited to join.

On the 20th of August, 1945, their charter was issued bearing the corporate seal of the Legion. This charter showing the names of those ex-servicewomen who formed the nucleus of Branch No. 182 is to be seen on the wall of the Britannia Branch reading room, their names: Mrs. Edith Chappel, Mrs. Grace Jennings, Mrs. Mary Church, Miss Dot Clarke (now Mrs. Henry Eng), Miss C. Finan, Mrs. M. Espley, Mrs. M. Inkin, Mrs. A. Pinnington, Miss D. Woodward, Miss R. Moore, Miss F. Knight, Mrs. B. M. White, Mrs. Hayes, and Miss Muriel Scott. Some chartered members are with the branch still.

The newly-formed branch having got their charter remained under the wing of Britannia Branch, and adopted the Legion aims and objects, and also took its by-laws from the Legion constitution. Once they got their feet on the ground the membership began increasing rapidly, and no time was lost in starting to raise funds for charitable work among disabled veterans. As membership increased their scope of activities widened.

At the end of 10 years Branch No. 182 was strengthened by the admission of members of other groups such as the ex-Nursing Sisters, ex-WCRNS, ex-ATS, ex-RCAF, who contributed largely. From then on they expanded their work.

In 1955 these ex-servicewomen had a rare treat in the visit of Her Royal Highness, the Princess Royal — former Controller-Commandant of the ATS.

Memories, laughter, and perhaps a few tears will be the order of the day Saturday, April 3, when more than 500 ex-servicewomen gather at the Empress Hotel for their ninth annual reunion.

Sponsored by the Ex-Servicewomen's Branch No. 182 of the Royal Canadian Legion of Victoria, the program will include the laying of a wreath on the Cenotaph, accompanied by a piper, in the morning; a reception at Government House in the afternoon; and a banquet in the evening.

Any woman who has served in any of the women's services in any of the wars is eligible to attend.

The idea of having an annual reunion is the brainchild of the Victoria Ex-Servicewomen's League, who held the first one in Victoria in 1957, with 200 present.

Since then the reunions have been held in various cities in British Columbia and women have attended from all over the province. Last year it was held in Penticton, with more than 300 attending.

This year's reunion will mark the 20th anniversary of the league here.

It will be the largest reunion to date, as nearly 1,000 applications have been received. Some came from as far east as Calgary and some from as far south as California.

The executive, headed by the president, Miss Dorothy Williams, was overwhelmed by the response, and could only accept the first 400 applications for the reception at Government House, and the first 500 for the banquet.

Following the banquet, there will be entertainment featuring Jerry Gosley, and a time of fellowship and community singing. Anyone who was unable to attend the banquet will be welcome to join in this part of the reunion to renew acquaintances and recall old memories of those dark days when women donned uniforms to bolster the allies' war effort.

GREAT DAYS OF THEATRE

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

Today, when the eyes of Victoria are focussed in admiration and considerable expectation on the McPherson Playhouse, with its almost limitless potential, it might be of some interest both to newcomers and to many of the old guard, to recall a comparatively little-known period during which this theatre was a going concern under the name of The Coliseum. One has heard much, recently, about the days of the Pantages, the York, and the Totem, but the bright lights of the Coliseum seem to have faded into obscurity. Which is too bad, because the repertory company then, composed mainly of locally well-known names, made itself deservedly popular.

It was a member of that group in the middle twenties, Miss Gladys Burton, now Mrs. Fred Ball, of 3335 Weald Road, who brought the matter to my attention, and turned over to me for my perusal two massive scrapbooks compiled by two other stars of the era, Captain Frank Allwood and his wife Eileen. They are full of references to Reginald Hincks, Major L. Bullock-Webster, Herbert Kent, Eva Hart, Stewart Clark, R. R. Webb, Vangie Beilby, Ernie Petch, George Brydone, and scores of others—all top players who would have graced any professional production anywhere.

Eileen Allwood, a widow now, lives in Parksville. She seems to have been singer, dancer, actress and costume designer. Her husband was actor, manager, author, playwright, engineer and sportsman, but, remarks one account of a presentation, was "usually too modest to let it be announced that he wrote some of the plays!"

Gladys Burton herself quite obviously scored with the audiences of the day, particularly in soubrette parts. As a group they flourished for some years. And they were paid. Before moving along to the Coliseum, they played at the then Princess Theatre, on Yates Street, and when this was re-christened the Playhouse, a note on the programs stated, "The Playhouse Company is purely a professional organization. Every person cast in a Playhouse show is paid a professional salary, and in this way a home industry in the truest sense of the word has been established."

Surely nobody will imply that we are capable of less today!

CHANGES CAME. The motion picture industry was really surging ahead, and it put a crimp in legitimate theatre. The Playhouse became a movie house, and the players moved out. But they gathered their forces, made a deal with the Pantages theatre, renamed themselves—according to the next batch of programs—the Victoria Dramatic and Operatic Company, and burgeoned forth more prolifically than ever. They offered operettas, both well-known shows and original ones, farces such as "Charlie's Aunt," the good, old, racing comedy, "Dandy Dick," and many others. It seems to have been about this time that the Pantages caught up with the movies, and became the Coliseum. And the local talent moved right in with the pictures. If the Coliseum Company didn't actually experience a wave of prosperity, at least it kept up a busy schedule. Eileen Allwood's scrapbooks for this period have dozens of programs, most of them what they called "tab shows," presumably because they were presented in tabloid form, along with an hour-long movie.

The movies themselves are a delight to recall. There was one, I see, featuring Priscilla Dean and advertised as being one of the most spectacular and unique pictures yet made, offering as it did "an underwater knife duel between Miss Dean and two men!" I was unable to figure out, quite, and tried to imagine whether Miss Dean fought the two men, whether they both ganged up on her, or whether they all fought each other in a fine, damp free-for-all, so I just took it for granted that Miss Dean came out on top.

EILEEN ALLWOOD
. . . star of the twenties

AT THIS POINT in the company's history its impresario was Ed Redmond, who had come north from California to establish a troupe here. 1925, '26 and '27 sailed by with a steady stream of productions including "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "A Good Little Bad Girl," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," "Johnny Get Your Gun," "Turn to the Right," "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and countless other oldies whose titles still ring a bell in memory, as well as original shows by Captain Allwood and Reginald Hincks, who both did gay and clever adaptations of, for instance, "Robin Hood" (with Eva Hart as Maid Marion), "Sinbad the Sailor," and occasional excursions into history with "The Return of Richard Coeur-de-Lion," pictures of which show beautiful and elaborate costuming, much of it the work of Eileen Allwood. Gilbert & Sullivan, and "The Pink Lady" were among the musicals done in tabloid form, and the press gave unstinted praise. Moreover, I doubt much if this was overdone, because the city's singers, dancers and performers of the era were excellent by any standards.

One local effort, however, though it seems not to have involved the Coliseum Company, apparently withered in failure. This was the city's first, and probably last, venture into movie-making. It was entitled "Romantic Rowena," with a cast of 200, and was heralded by huge ads, shouting, "Hailed by All as the Forerunner of a NEW INDUSTRY!" There were brave optimistic letters to the newspaper editors exhorting the public to support this splendid project. One, in particular, from Major Bullock-Webster, stated that though he personally had no direct interest in the business, nevertheless as a citizen he "would like to see this very praiseworthy effort meet with appreciation and support."

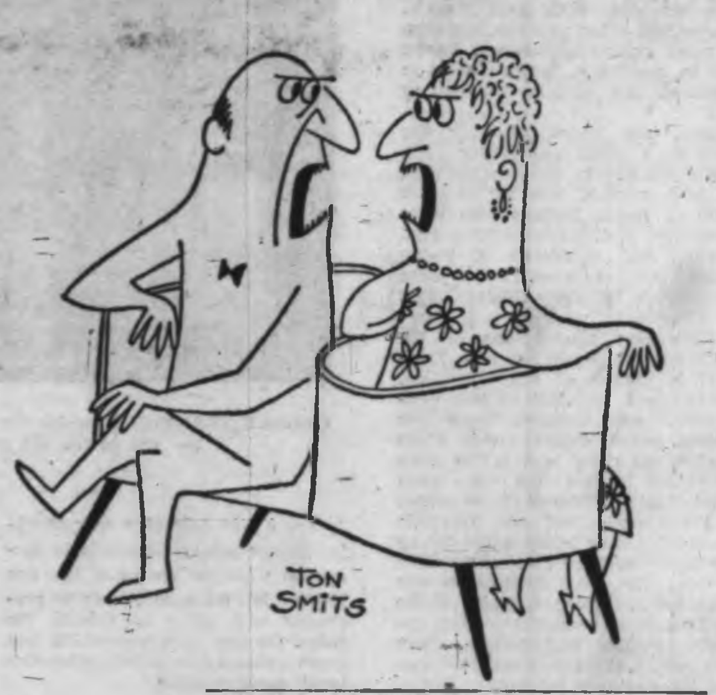
UNFORTUNATELY, the motion picture seems not to have had what it takes. A printed criticism says, "Victoria Apathetic to Home Effort," and remarks that ". . . In all friendship, it is not by such process as this that the Island can hope to get anywhere in the picture game." And after that, as far as local movie-making was concerned, there emerges only a deep, sad silence.

Gradually, of course, there arrived the talkies, and these spelled the beginning of the end. They were new, they were fascinating, and business fell off fatally in the legitimate theatre. An age-old situation developed at the Coliseum. Salaries became badly in arrears, with no prospect of being made up, and finally the company must be paid off with bits and pieces, props, costumes, and even, said Eileen, oddments of personal jewelry. The members scattered. Eva Hart, in private life Mrs. J. Q. Gillan, left with her husband and sons for Ottawa. Frank and Eileen Allwood went to Revelstoke, where they carried on with varied theatrical ventures together until the war came and Frank went overseas, while Eileen taught singing and kept his insurance business going in his absence. Producer Ed Redmond went back to California, and presently Gertrude Burton joined his new company in San Jose. Stewart Clark became associated with the Little Theatre at Langham Court. And so it went. The curtain had rung down upon the Coliseum Company for the last time . . . and this is the saddest thing that can happen to any theatrical company. The house on Government Street was dark once more.

NOW AND THEN visiting shows came, dusted the place off, performed, and departed forever. Conventions and lecturers from time to time caused the ghosts to weep with their unromantic and magicless presence. We of the York Company came, had our chance, and muffed it. Totem came into an impossible situation, and hadn't a prayer. Well might the Mask of Tragedy mourn . . .

Today we start all over again. Never has the fine old building looked lovelier, and perhaps this time there's enough money to carry over the inevitable period of sluggishness. Because it takes Victoria audiences, who are travelled, informed, and discriminating, a little while to make certain that they will be offered a steady diet of worthwhile fare. But when their confidence is won, they are enthusiastic patrons.

There is no reason why the McPherson Playhouse should not be the instrument that carves a top cultural spot in the Dominion for Victoria, B.C. And that's quite a responsibility.



George Tranfield is Kentucky Stock, A Fast Man with a Broadaxe

A new log house, built near Parksville by a man who can handle a broadaxe with either hand, holds memories of stage coach days on Vancouver Island. George Tranfield, born in Nanaimo in 1891, son and grandson of men who pioneered the west, built the 70-foot-long, nine-room house a stone's throw from the old Halfway House which he and his family have occupied for the past nine years.

FATHER FOUGHT LAWLESS HAIDAS

by MARGARET TREBETT

In 1954 Mr. Tranfield bought the 32 acres of land where the stopping place has stood since road travel was instituted between Nanaimo and Alberni in the 1880s. The frame house into which he moved his family was the second Halfway House and had replaced a log building destroyed by fire in the early '90s. It was sagging on its foundation, but it provided a roof for the Tranfields while the husband and father worked on his project.

The logs were cut from second growth trees on the property. Some were 32 feet long and all had to be broadaxed to a uniform nine-inch diameter.

Recently the family moved into the long, low house which has an interior combining the rustic of homesteading days and all the conveniences of modern living.

George Tranfield, a master storyteller, has kept alive the spirit of the pioneers, just as he has retained their skills.

He and his attractive wife, Pauline, have seven sons and daughters, ranging from eight-year-old Alex to David, 27. May, 17, and Alex are now the only ones living at home, but the others and the four grandchildren come to visit frequently.

The handsome rock fireplace, topped by a mantel built by George from a slab of burl maple, makes a fine background for his stories of three generations of pioneer living.

His grandfather, an earlier George, was a veteran of the Crimean War. He and the present George's father, Alex, came west from Kentucky, took part in many phases of the opening of the west, including the B.C. gold rush. George, the elder, was the first man to raise sheep on Lasqueti Island and to operate a butcher shop in Nanaimo. He died in Nanaimo in 1879.

Alex was known all over the coast as a guide and hunter. His son recalls how he was sent out with a "dead or alive" warrant to get a band of Haida Indians who were terrorizing Gulf Island settlers and, finally, had murdered a young woman and her father as they were proceeding by sloop from Comox to Victoria.

Travelling aboard one of the early coastal steamships with Tranfield in charge of the expedition, several men, including another Kentuckian, gave chase. When the Haidas were sighted near Cape Mudge, the party took to the sloop they had in tow and were soon within hailing distance of the canoe.

Shots were fired and Tranfield received a face injury when hit by a splinter from the mast of the little vessel. The other Kentuckian was wounded in the leg, but nine of the 11 men in the canoe were brought back for trial in Nanaimo. Two, apparently, had gone overboard during the exchange of fire.

GEORGE TRANFIELD outside the picturesque log home he has built on the site of the old stage line stopping-place.

There was talk of a manslaughter charge against Tranfield in connection with the deaths of the two Haidas, but the case was never proceeded with after he showed the judge the slip of paper which had commissioned him to bring the men back, dead or alive.

This was the last of the raids by the Haidas, George Tranfield said.

He told another tale of how his father accompanied a police constable to Alert Bay in connection with a hunt for a murderer. All the Indians, up and down the coast, were gathering for a potlatch and Alex Tranfield undertook to find out who was the guilty man.

He knew the dialects of the West Coast bands and was familiar with Chinook. Leaving the constable outside, he entered the potlatch house one night and heard a man boast of killing "many white men" with a weapon made from a trade file. He implicated another member of his band in his speech to the gathering. According to the story, Tranfield shot the boaster with a revolver and held the rest of the crowd at bay while the other murderer was arrested.

Alex Tranfield acted as interpreter in many Indian trials at Nanaimo and was well acquainted with the "Rope Tyee," Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, judge and finally chief justice of the colony.

He guided many homesteaders and hunting parties in early days and it is a matter of record that, in 1882, he was one of only six white men in the Alberni Valley.

George Tranfield, who made his first trip to Alberni when he was only two years old, remembers later trips with his parents over the road when there were no more than half a dozen families between Nanaimo and Parksville.

Some of the stories he tells are of conditions as he knew them, others are hearsay, told by his father and his friends.

He tells of how a large herd of elk at Whiskey Creek was wiped out after a stage driver reported seeing a cow and yearling on the trip from Alberni to Nanaimo. A group of Englishmen from Victoria went up and shot every last one of them, he said.

He himself remembers when venison was sold in butcher shops. While beef was two-bits a pound, deer meat sold for one bit, or 12½ cents.

Wagon loads of deer piled like cordwood were brought into the city.

One winter there was a market for deer hides at 25 cents apiece, and a Parksville man was said to have shot 100 deer just for the hides.

One time when Alex Tranfield was coming down from Cape Scott by sailing canoe, he camped on the final night of the journey at the mouth of Englishman River. In the morning he shot a large bull elk from his camp, dressed it out, loaded it in his canoe and was in Nanaimo before the sun was high. He sold the meat to the captain of a sailing ship ready to pull out to sea.

LOOK at the LILIES

Erythronium Oregonum is the botanical name of the dainty flower commonly called the "Easter Lily," though it is seldom in bloom at Easter. It is also known as the "Dogtooth Violet" and the "Fawn Lily."

In the spring many thoughtless people pick every lily they can find. If these "flower lovers" knew that it takes from five to seven years from seed to flower one can only hope they would think twice before picking the flowers which wilt almost as soon as picked, and for that reason are often tossed away.

Due to wanton picking and to many woodland areas being logged off and subdivided the lilies, and many more of our precious wild flowers, are becoming more scarce every year.

It has been claimed that picking Erythroniums kills the bulb. It does not necessarily, but it takes several years for the bulb to recover.

There is a pretty little legend, though rather a pathetic one, regarding the Erythronium.

Many, many moons ago, a doe deer hid her fawn deep in the forest, telling it not to move until she came back.

Days went by and the doe did not return. A hunter had killed her. The obedient little fawn lay still, where she had hidden it. Slowly the tired little head sank lower and lower until it rested on the moss. The big trusting eyes closed. At last the little dappled body was covered by the forest mold until only the spotted ears showed; finally they too were hidden.

Next spring there slowly pushed up through the moss where the little fawn had laid hidden, two spotted leaves in the shape of fawn's ears. Between the leaves on a slender stalk, there came a beautiful white flower. And so, the first Fawn Lily was born.

The trillium, or "Wake Robin," too, is in bloom at this time. Walking through the woods at dusk one is impressed by its luminous whiteness which makes the flowers glow in the semi-dark like little stars.

The trillium is said to represent the Holy Trinity by its three leaves and three-petaled flower. The trillium is protected and there is a $25 fine to discourage its picking.

In some parts of the province the Pacific Dogwood, the official emblem of B.C., is already in bloom.

LILIES MARK a hallowed spot . . . in St. Mary's Churchyard, Metchosin. —Robin Clarke.

. . . but please, don't pick

There are few flowering trees more beautiful or eye catching than a dogwood in full bloom.

The name is derived from "dagwood." Skewers, or "dags," were once made from its wood.

Probably most people are familiar with the legend of the dogwood.

It is said the dogwood was once a tall straight tree and its wood was used to make the cross upon which Christ was crucified. This made the dogwood so unhappy that Jesus promised that it should never again be used for such a cruel purpose. Never again should it grow tall enough or thick enough to be used for a cross.

The white bracts represent the cross; the reddish brown marks at the tips are the nail holes; the greenish flower the crown of thorns.

One often sees people loading armfuls of dogwood branches laden with blossoms into their cars.

Too bad there is not a Mountie at hand to inform them they are breaking the law and are liable to a fine.

The dogwood and the cascara are the only B.C. trees which are protected by law.

We should do all we can to save our vanishing wild flowers for future generations to enjoy.

FATHER FOUGHT LAWLESS HAIDAS

Cougar, or panther as they were called in those days, were numerous in the Parksville area. Alex Tranfield shot 12 of them in two days when he was asked by a settler named Plummer to clean out the marauders which were killing the sheep on his Englishman River farm.

George Tranfield plans to demolish the old Halfway House, which can no longer be regarded as habitable, but before it goes he would like to collect more details of its history. He is not sure what year it was built but newspapers lining the walls are dated 1896 and he can recall it when it was in use as a stopping place for the horse stage passengers.

Joe McCarter, who put the first stage on the road when it was built about 1882, is believed to have run the Halfway House in its early days. A Mr. and Mrs. Kiest were in charge for many years and some Alberni old-timers recall breaking the 52-mile trip with an overnight stay at the house where Mrs. Kiest served meals and prepared beds, never knowing in advance how many she would be asked to handle.

Mr. Tranfield bought the property from Horace Young who had made it his home for many years.

In the log house which Mr. Tranfield has built for his family, there are two bedrooms upstairs, three down; kitchen, dining room, utility room, and a large living room where rustic woodwork is shown to advantage. Posts and railing of the stairway going up from the living room were shaped out by the Tranfield broadaxe.

Logs cut on the property are burned in the fireplace, but the house is heated by an oil furnace and there are all the other conveniences of modern living beneath the shake roof.

The owner, now retired after active life in the open, finds the days none too long for all his activities. He makes tables and ornaments from maple burls, finding and cutting his own burls. In hunting season he fills the family freezer with game. There's wood to cut and pile.

With all his chores, Mr. Tranfield has found time to write a 30,000-word book, which, although he hasn't found a publisher for it, should be a real gold mine of Vancouver Island lore.

Skaha was a Scamp . . .

HUNGER, the MOTHER

Hunger, or the dread of it, is the underlying cause of many, if not most, of man's activities, the great migrations, and the wars of the primitives. Of course Professor Morlee would certainly deny the implication that he made his trip into the mountains in search of food. And he would be right. He went because he believed Skaha's yarn. And Skaha pitched the professor the sale for one reason only.

Skaha was hungry!

by O. E. FRENCH

(The late Mr. French, who has been contributing to THE ISLANDER for the past several years, died within a few days of completing the last story he wrote for this magazine. He was born in 1883, lived at Blue River for 41 years, and had been a woodsman all his life. He knew the mountains and the creatures of the wilds as few men of his time, and he wrote of them with understanding and deep sympathy.)

Before proceeding with this account it might be in order to glance at this Skaha's antecedents. Away back in the wild-horse-catching days he had been known as Man-Who-Can-Tire-Out-a-Horse. This chain-of-rattles Indian name had long ago been reduced to its last link, Skaha. That is to say, horse.

And Man-Who-etc. had also been sadly reduced, likewise his means of livelihood. The wild horses were gone and the white man had brought the iron horse to the Thompson Valley in 1885. By 1901 the deer which formerly roamed the bunchgrass slopes of British Columbia's "dry belt" in countless numbers, unfailing source of food and clothing for the Indians, had been reduced to an insignificant remnant. Storekeepers paid a dollar apiece for their hides and shipped them out in quantity. Investors in the newly-profitable cattle businesss encouraged the slaughter. Deer ate grass, too.

By the turn of the century there were probably more pounds of meat on the range than ever before but Skaha and his people had lost their right and title to it.

Physically Skaha was nothing to the man he had once been. It would be a very anemic horse that he would be able to "walk down." The skin on his stringy, brown wrists and the backs of his corded, claw-like hands was dry, wrinkled almost scaly. His dessicated, bird-like neck seemed incredibly thin to contain windpipe and esophagus. His bony legs in their faded, blue-overall covering suggested hinged hop-poles.

But the brain beneath the ancient, Stetson-crowned brindled mane was far from senescent. As his physical powers declined Skaha perforce relied increasingly upon his own cunning and the quirks and weaknesses of other men—Cheechakos preferred.

The first white men Skaha ever saw were in a party of placer miners. They were on the opposite side of the river. From the concealment of an olallie thicket he watched them making their way-upriver. He was not impressed.

During the succeeding half-century he added an astonishing number of items to his store of anthropological data about white men. In these latter days this fund had great survival-value, but there was one major drawback. Skaha had used it too often. Everybody except fools and strangers was onto him.

As old François Courlee remarked to professor Morlee: "I wouldn't believe that Siwash on a stack of Bibles 20 feet high!"

Courlee was the proprietor of the stopping-place named after him. There was a general store, a hotel with half a dozen bedrooms, kitchen, dining room and a bar; horse stables and a storehouse—all log buildings with shake roofs.

It was about 40 miles from the main line of the Canadian Pacific in the heart of the cattle country, a stop on the stage line, on the proposed route of the railway spur into the coal prospects and a port of call for grizzly-seeking sportsmen, cattle-buyers, prospectors and the occasional unclassified sojourner.

Professor Morlee seemed to belong to this latter category in that he had not specified exactly what he professed. Indeed he had given out no specifications whatever except that he was interested in the "culture" of the Thompson River Indians. He had arrived from the coast armed with a "Chinook Book"—a dictionary of the HBC trade jargon (Hudson's Bay Co., pub., 25c) and for the first few days made a nuisance of himself to Courlee, the storekeeper, bartender and even the Chinese cook by pestering them with this "Indian language."

Courlee had labeled him professor and finally in self-defense shooed him off to a skinny, wrinkled old aborigine, an expert in Chinook, who seemed to have nothing to do but sit in the shade of the hotel porch.

The professor was a new type of a familiar species to Skaha. A new brand of cheechako. Cautiously he tried him out with tales (largely in Chinook) of gigantic and fantastically colored grizzlies that might be secured . . . with fascinating fabrications of auriferous streams of which, he Skaha, alone knew the location—all without striking a spark.

The professor was deeply interested in learning that the Thompson name for the grizzly was "shoo shoo," and that gold was "pil chicamin" in the Chinook wawa; but he manifgested not the slightest desire to hunt or dig.

Skaha was piqued and he began to study this youngish, slightly-stooped, pleasant-mannered person who failed to respond to his stock cheechako-beguilers.

Also the spur of necessity was presently added to the pricking of pride and the old Indian finally went into high gear.

Skaha made his home with a nephew who lived on a small reserve—"rancheree"—a scant two miles down the road from Courlee's. This nephew, Nicomen by name, had a wife who was noted for a certain sprightliness, a generous, carefree attitude toward life. The husband, somewhat more conventional, made periodic protest against what he considered undecorous conduct on the part of his spouse, these remonstrances sometimes assuming a form in which Nicomen justified his name. Nicomen means knife in the Thompson wawa.

One of these climaxes occurred about the time the professor came to Courlee's. Nicomen came home from his haying job on one of the ranches to find an unsound domestic situation. He responded effectively. The local magistrate, however, while expressing sympathy, considered the husband had acted with unnecessary vigor. Remarking that the other man would probably be laid up for three months he gave Nicomen the same time in the Skookum House.

As Courlee said: "Sort o' gives both of 'em an even break."

All this was of no concern to Skaha. He had outlived—and out-fought—several wives and the eternal triangle now merely bored him. But when the grub began to run out, when there was no money coming in with Nicomen in jail, when Courlee refused credit—that was a horse of a distinctly different shade. Skaha was hungry.

And Skaha hungry was, if no longer a man of physical action, a man of decision. This day, he decided, he would put it to the touch. As he rack-shacked along the dusty road to Courlee's that August morning aboard his pink-eyed, calico-blotched cayuse Skaha inspected the angles and fool-proofed the joints of his scheme.

When the pony joggled to a halt at Courlee's hitch-rail the professor was awaiting him on the porch. Skaha approached slowly, his leathery countenance screwed into an expression of extreme dolour and fired his opening gun. "Sick tumtum," he announced, gazing mournfully up at the tall Englishman with obsidian eyes, unfathomable as twin pools of tar.

Professor Morlee turned the pages of his pocket reference and discovered that sick did not necessarily mean ill, that tumtum was not stomach, that Skaha did not have a stomachache but was mentally disturbed. The professor, kindly man, asked what was the trouble. Skaha elucidated, largely in Chinook.

It seemed that last night he had a dream in which he had been commanded by Saghalie Tyee (the chief up above) to tell his friend the professor about a certain wonderful ictah (thing) which he had once in the long-ago seen at a remote place in the mountains.

Now Skaha had been certain that Keekwillie Tyee (the chief down below) had made this wonderful thing, that he had placed it in this far spot to make sure that no human eye saw it or sacreligious hand touched it.

Therefore Skaha, through these many years, had never mentioned to anyone the thing he had seen, thereby escaping the wrath of Keekwillie Tyee. Now however he was—Chinook version—on the horns of a dilemma. If he did not obey Saghalie Tyee that deity would certainly be very angry—delait selliks. If he told the professor Keekwillie Tyee might become annoyed—klonas chaco selliks.

Would his sikhs—friend—advise him?

Professor Morlee, curiosity slightly stimulated, pointed out what Skaha had craftily made obvious. It would be better to risk the anger of Keekwillie than to incur the certain displeasure of Saghalie.

Thus reassured Skaha, after sundry hesitations and indecisions, resolutely divulged the great secret.

At the foot of a very high, very steep mountain there was a stone man, seated in a stone canoe, holding a stone paddle in his hands. This he, Skaha, had seen.

Not for nothing had the old rascal watched the professor admiring—and purchasing—the intricately silk-worked gauntlet gloves and the water-tight baskets of woven cedar roots that the Indian women brought to Courlee's. He knew not "culture" by that name, but he had decided that Professor Morlee was interested in the manufactures (mamook) of the country. And although the theory that the bigger the lie the more readily it will be believed had not yet been evolved Skaha was fully aware that it takes a big bait to tempt a large fish. Also he knew at once that his lure was successful. The professor's eye had lighted with the Argonaut gleam that Skaha had previously been unsuccessful in kindling. The angler was prepared to play his catch.

Would he take the professor to this place? Skaha recoiled in horror at the suggestion. Should he so fly in the face of the nether deity misfortune would certainly come, not only upon him but also upon those members of his family who were even now hard put to it for sustenance — Starvation, a gradual, painful wasting away to final complete oblivion, all in Chinook complete with gestures!

. . . but An Entertaining Rascal

OF INVENTIVENESS

CARIBOO COUNTRY . . . where Skaha led the way.

Howwever, Skaha said, Keekwillie was already annoyed. If his friend the professor would guarantee protection from hunger for a time, say three months, and give Sagahlie Tyee the opportunity to exercise his authority over the lesser chief below . . .

Courlee glanced from the list of groceries to the professor, to Skaha, impassive in the background, and back to the pencilled memorandum.

"You want me to send all this stuff down to Big-Foot Annie's? That klootch never had that much grub at one time in her life! You want to keep away from them women, young feller. Her man's in jail now fer knifin' a guy an' he'll be out . . ."

"You misunderstand," The professor was red but dignified. "I have no personal interest . . ."

Professor Morlee had not intended to reveal what he was sure he had learned. Sugar plums of fame were dancing through his head. He saw himself reading a paper on the ancient culture of this land. He saw the precious letters FRGS attached to the name of Morlee and he hesitated to jeopardize all this. Someone might somehow forestall him.

But the grin on Courlee's face was too much. He knew about the occasional Englishman "going native" and he resented the implication that he was one of those unfortunates. He decided to explain.

The old Frenchman heard him out and expressed positive and profane disbelief. But he was unable to extract any admissions of guile from Skaha and the professor's faith remained unshaken.

"After all," he argued, "what is so incredible about there being pre-historic stone-workers in this country? Think of the gigantic stone images of Easter Island. They have never been explained. And how could an unimaginative savage invent such a tale?"

"Unimaginative, huh?" Courlee turned his head away for a moment. "Well maybe. Don't know much about imagination myself, never havin' much use fer it. Never heard of this Easter place either. But there's one thing sure; you're fixin' to make a Christmas present to old Horse, here."

"Well really, that should be my privilege, don't you think? And you were recommended to me as an outfitter by my hotel in Victoria."

"Oh, all right, it's your money. I'll send the grub down to the reservation. Have to rustle a man to pack and cook for you, too. Skaha's gettin' too old to work, even if he would."

Organizing pack outfits was Courlee's business. His contribution to the party's personnel was Henry, a short, thick-set, taciturn individual whom the professor had noticed about the place. He was, in fact, Courlee's factotum, the second in command, and in this case his plenipotentiary. He cooked and made camp and looked after the two packhorses and was always busy, bored and silent.

For 10 days Skaha led the professor on a zigzag course through the hills. On the lower slopes they rode through park-like forests of yellow and bull pine which changed to wind-shaken red fir at higher altitudes but still remained practically free of underbrush. Occasionally they crossed a ridge high enough to thrust a condensing finger into the moisture-laden westerly air currents and here the vegetation changed its character. Dense stands of lodgepole pine alternated and mingled with spruce and balsam-fir and the forest floor was covered with a tangle of buckbrush, huckleberry and wild peavine. But always through these tracts a dim, unblazed trail unwound before Skaha's cayuse, a meandering course that nevertheless chose the best route with an unerring certainty that aroused the unwilling admiration of the packer.

From the first it had been apparent to Henry that the old man was merely killing time. Professor Morlee had been generous with the commissary. There was canned fruit and butter and cheese and raisins in addition to the more common staple articles. Skaha saw no reason whatever for allowing any of these good things to get back to Courlee's. As for time, it was all one to him whether he half-dozed away the hours in the saddle, on Courlee's porch or in the cabin on the reservation.

Courlee had provided Professor Morlee with heavy leather "chaps" but nevertheless he began twitching and shifting in the saddle before the end of the first day.

The second day he stood in the stirrups, rode first on one thigh and then the other and otherwise disposed his person as saddle-sore misery suggested.

The third day he asked the question that all journeying cheechakos everywhere and always ask: "How much farther?"

Old Skaha turned his head and made brief answer: "Tenas siyah."

Professor Morlee looked up the words and found that tenas meant little or small; that siyah referred to space or distance. Every morning the professor hopefully asked the same question and received the unvarying answer.

"Tenas siyah." A little farther.

But on the ninth evening they ate the last can of pineapple for supper. And next morning there were just bacon and butterless flapjacks for breakfast and no canned milk for the coffee. There was a ring of authenticity to Skaha's "tenas siyah" as they broke camp that morning.

Courlee was smoking his pipe on the porch in the cool of the evening when he saw Skaha's pinto come around the bend in the road. Several lengths behind came the professor, while Henry brought up the rear behind the packhorses.

As they approached the hotel Skaha kneed his pony to the far side of the road and drifted past in dignified silence, eyes front. Professor Morlee dismounted stiffly, gave the reins to Courlee, to the latter's question about supper muttered something about not requiring anything, limped across the porch and draggingly ascended the stairs.

Courlee turned to Henry, but he was loosening the cinch on a packsaddle, back turned. They unsaddled and unpacked, took the cayuses to the stable and fed them and returned to the hotel, all without a word. They piled the camp equipment and saddles on the porch and went inside.

Courlee led the way into the narrow barroom, lit a coal oil lamp and set a bottle of John Dewars and two glasses on the bar. He poured a full glass for Henry, a small one for himself, and they drank.

"Been good weather," Courlee offered, refilling Henry's glass. Henry grunted and crooked his elbow. Courlee shoved the bottle over to him, refilled and lighted his pipe and waited. Henry held the bottle between him and the yellow flame of the wall lamp, squinted meditatively and tilted the bottle carefully over his glass.

Suddenly he set the bottle on the bar, raised his right hand high and brought it down on his meaty thigh with a smack that made the trail dust fly.

"You should'a been along, Francois!"

"Yeah? I wish I could have been but we couldn't both go. What happened, anyway?"

"Well, the general blow-off was just about what we expected. Skaha had everything figured, o' course. But you sure have to hand it to that Siwash! I thought I knew ever' notch an' sag they was in these hills. But that old whelp, after foolin' around 'till all the Christmas part of our chuck was et up, took us through a keyhole pass in to them big mud slides at the head of the Anderson. I'd a' bet money they wasn't a pass you could take a horse through to the Fraser side within 10 miles of there."

"What the devil did he want in there?"

Henry poured a few more drops in his glass and set the bottle back on the bar with a thump.

"Devil is right. That was his 'out,' he had figured. He picks the biggest slide, an she was sure a skookum one, fresh too, an' starts spittin' Chinook. 'Keekwillie Tyee, he says, has put that million-ton slide on top o' them ictahs o' his'.."

"Well, I be damn! How did the professor take it?"

"Seemed kinda dazed. Looked through his Chinook book some. Didn't say much."

Courlee reached for the bottle and filled both glasses. "You suppose he's onto old Skaha yet?"

"Well, if he ain't dumb from the middle to both ends he must be. We come home from there today. Ten days to go an' one to come! He seemed to be tryin' to catch up to old Horse this afternoon but he was too saddle-sore to speed up. The old buzzard kept a couple o' jumps ahead all the time."

Henry sniffed his Scotch, held it to the light and took a sip.

"Oh, yeah. He tumbled all right. Just before we come out on the stage road I see him take that Chinook book outa his pocket an' give it a throw into the brush."

Nutritious and Delicious for Lent . . . or Any Time

FISH FARE

Between Ash Wednesday and Easter Sunday, many a housewife is particularly concerned with the preparation of meatless meals. With an ocean skirting our shores and with lakes and rivers yielding an abundant variety of salt and fresh water fish there should be no problem of meals with variety.

During the balance of the year we actually consume much less fish in comparison to meat products. If you have been one of those people who have been overlooking fish in your menus, do treat your family during Lent to this fine protein. Besides protein, fish is a good source of minerals so necessary to our daily needs.

There is a long list of impressive ways to cook fish . . . luncheon dishes, dinner dishes, casseroles, soups, stews and chowders to name a few. Many of these dishes were created originally as Lenten fare, but are now year-round favorites for family meals and for informal entertaining.

With the advent of Lent, readers have been asking me particularly for recipes for cooking some of our less colorful fish, such as halibut, cod and sole. Most of us are inclined to choose a nice salmon steak when thinking of a fish dinner. However, if we are going to serve fish with some degree of regularity during Lent we must have variety. Over a period of several weeks we must consider economy, too.

The popularity of certain fish seems to depend to a great extent on its color. Pink salmon, cod, halibut and sole are just as nutritious as red salmon, lobster or shrimp, but they seem to have less appeal. Pale fish must be well seasoned and garnished . . . It's up to the cook.

Let's start with a very good dish using halibut or cod fillets. These are baked in a peppy sauce that adds both flavor and color. The base of the sauce is rich evaporated milk to add extra goodness.

THOUSAND ISLAND FISH BAKE . . . One pound halibut or cod fillets (fresh or frozen), 1 small tin evaporated milk, 2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce, 1 tbsp. prepared mustard, 2 tsp. vinegar, ½ tsp. salt, dash pepper, 1 tbsp. chopped pickle relish and 2 tbsp. catsup. (Seasoned salt and seasoned pepper will add extra flavor). Thaw fillets if frozen. Pre-heat oven to 450°. Measure evaporated milk into a bowl. Add all the seasonings, relish and catsup. Arrange fish fillets in a shallow, foil-lined baking dish. Spoon sauce over fillets. Bake in preheated oven for about 15 minutes or until piping hot and bubbly. Baste with the rich sauce during baking.

Here is a zippy red sauce that can be used with any white fish, with fish sticks and with prawns.

JIFFY RED SAUCE . . . One cup chili sauce, ½ cup fresh lemon juice, 1 tbsp. instant minced onion and 1 tsp. horseradish. Combine the ingredients and cook over a low heat about 10 minutes. Yields about 1 cup.

Fillet of sole is a cook's favorite for several reasons . . . There is no waste in the skinned and boned fillets; they are available all year around, fresh or frozen; being small the fillets cook quickly, retaining the delicate sweetness of their fine-textured flesh. The following recipe comes from the Canadian department of fisheries:

FILLET OF SOLE WITH DILL PICKLE . . . One pound sole fillets, 1 large dill pickle (or as many whole baby dills as fillets), ¼ cup butter, ¼ cup flour, 1 cup milk, ½ tsp. thyme, 1 cup grated cheddar cheese, 2 tbsp. minced parsley, and salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle each fillet with salt and pepper. Cut whole pickle lengthwise into slices of the same number as there are fillets (or use a tiny whole pickle to each fillet). Roll up like a jelly roll. Place rolls close together in a shallow greased baking dish. For the sauce . . . melt the butter and blend in flour. Slowly add the milk and thyme. Cool over low heat until thickened. Add cheese and stir until melted. Mix in parsley. Pour sauce over fillets. Bake in a preheated 425° oven for about 20 minutes. Will serve 2 or 3. Garnish with lemon wedges.

Halibut is a fine, firm, white fish and there are a number of interesting ways to fix it. This is the fish most popular for batter-dipped deep frying. (Cod is also cooked this way.) Prepared with sour cream and almonds it is an elegant dish.

FISH ALMONDINE . . . For 4 people buy about 2 pounds of halibut fillets or use 4 halibut steaks. Arrange them in a foil-lined, shallow baking dish and sprinkle with 1 tsp. salt (the seasoned salt is good as it gives a little extra flavor), a dash of pepper and about ½ teaspoon of dried thyme or tarragon. Bake in a 350° oven for 20 minutes. Then top with 1 cup sour cream and ¼ cup unblanched almonds, slivered. Continue baking until the fish flakes easily but is still moist . . . about 10 to 15 minutes longer.

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's the way I use plastic squeeze bottles that contained liquid dishwashing soap:

Starting approximately three inches from the bottom, I cut two-thirds of the way around the bottle, then cut upward and across to form a tab. This gives me a handy three-inch container with a tab for attaching it to a wall.

Heating an ice pick, I punch a hole in the tab so that it can be thumbtacked to wooden cabinets or hung from gummed picture hangers on metal surfaces. Then I decorate and label it with a felt-tip pen.

These containers are wonderful in the kitchen fo matches, pins, stamps, coupons, soap pads, etc. Used on bathroom walls or cabinets, they hold razor blades, small medicine bottles, pil
items.

Place one at the proper height in your shower stall to hold shampoo . . . no more stooping or groping for the bottle of shampoo.

And, best of all, they never rust.

LEMON PUDDING . . . One-half sugar, 1 tbsp. butter, 2 tbsp. flour, ⅓ cup lemon juice, 1 tbsp. lemon rind, 2 eggs separated, 1 cup milk. Blend sugar, butter and the 2 egg yolks. Add flour, lemon juice and rind. Add milk and mix well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a medium sized casserole or 8x8-inch square baking pan. Place in a pan of water and bake in a 325° oven for about 45 minutes. Serve hot or cold, with or without whipped cream. Serves 4.

A FINE LUNCHEON DISH for Lent is a French fried salmon sandwich . . . Spread salmon between whole wheat bread slices. Dip in milk and egg mixture as for French toast and fry in butter. Turn once.

A pinch of chopped fresh ginger root (from Chinatown) gives a delightful flavor to any fish dish. Use just a little.

A white sauce, chock full of chopped, hard-cooked egg and chopped parsley is nice with almost any fish. Season the white sauce well.

Give fish sticks a bright, new look by spreading them with flavorful topping before popping them in the oven . . . chili sauce, catsup, sauted chopped onion or strips of processed Canadian cheese.

A tart rhubarb relish is lovely with fish . . . see recipe in THE COLONIST MURIEL WILSON COOK BOOK, page 80. The name is "Rhubarb Devil" and it is equally good with cold meat. The recipe makes about 3½ pints of this hot, sweet and spicy relish.

Worms, 'Hoppers and Other Crawly Things . . .

TRICKS to TAKE the WILY TROUT

. . . and all his finny friends

There is a disease, an extremely contagious one, that afflicts about 60 per cent of the male population of B.C. each year. It doesn't necessarily confine itself to the male of course, or to the adult. Its symptoms are easily recognisable. It occurs with the spring of the year, the leafing out of the trees, the advent of the wild lily. It usually starts with a restlessness and a rather glazed look in the eye.

The cure is simple. Go fishing!

E. D. 'Bud' DUNNETT

It used to be a little more serious a few years ago when trout fishing opened in March and closed in November. The three months' closed season was murder, but now we fish all year 'round and the anticipation of opening day is gone. It is usually dependent now on the weather.

First a word here to the other brethren of the rod and reel, the fly fisherman. First, if you do not agree to bait fishing, throw this article down now. It would only raise your blood pressure. Secondly, if you read on and still feel unconvinced of the merits and fun of bait fishing, don't knock it. Try it!

It always gets me mad, boiling mad, when some of the fly-fishing clan refer to the bait fisherman as "hardware men" or "garden fisherman." Why? Because I think everyone is entitled to fish as he wishes, whether it be with rod and reel, fly, or hand line. We know that all of us may not be equal in strength of body, education or wealth, but we are at least equal in asking that our opinions and preferences be treated with consideration. I say this because there are certain men, or groups of men who fly fish exclusively and would have everyone else do likewise; and these fellows are so narrow-minded they could look through a keyhole with both eyes.

As, for myself, I like fishing—any kind of fishing. I also like fish for their succulence, their sport and the uncertain quest of trying to catch them. When I go fishing I like to return with a good catch, whether large or small. I like to give them to my friends and (Heaven forgive me) bask in the little glimmer of limelight that such a gift brings.

NOW LET'S TALK about bait—the kind, and its uses, and when. Probably the most universal bait used is the worm and a remarkable bait he is. He's free for the getting in most areas and is available all the year. Oh, he's tough to find in the summer months alright and at up-Island points, particularly, signs hang up on the highways, "50 worms—50c." But with a little effort on your part early in the year, you can ignore these advertisements. I'll explain how.

In the spring of the year when you or friend wife is mucking about in the garden, carry a can with you and pick them up as they appear. Don't be too fussy as to size, the small ones will grow. If you do this regularly you will find yourself with quite a crop and you will reap the profit later on. As you acquire your crawlers, they should be transferred to a large box, say about three feet by two feet by 18 inches deep. Holes should be drilled in the bottom for drainage and fine window screening placed inside on the bottom to prevent them from escaping. Fill your box with good earth, preferably leaf loam mixed with clay and peat moss. Worms prefer damp, but not wet soil, so keep your supply in a cool place and cover with a wet sack or old wool blanket, and keep it moist. Feed them rolled oats and tea leaves (sans bag) and milk and you will have a continuous crop for the season.

Here on the coast we have mainly three types of earth worms. The night crawlers you will find on your lawn, the manure type, who are marked by the round red rings which encircle his body, and the grey-colored earth worms. They are all good, but the manure worm leads the group in fish getting. And why?? Well, confidentially, he stinks. Yes, stinks. And this I feel is why he is so popular with fish. Admittedly, he is soft and doesn't stay too long on a hook but he's the best you can use.

THE GREY-COLORED earth worm is probably the most popular in use, because he is tough, and when trolling, stays on longer when you are plagued with small fish. I like this fellow for that reason. Dew worms are good but very soft and I use them only when the others are not available.

If you are going away for a few days' fishing, get yourself an English cookie can such as Peek Frean biscuits are packed in. Place four or five folded sheets of paper that have been soaked in water on the bottom. Now place damp moss mixed with a little earth on top of the layers about four inches deep until the can is full. They'll keep a week or more this way.

Now you have a good bait, so why not endeavor to place it before a trout in its natural state. Look in a puddle sometime along the city boulevards. You will see worms in these puddles. Is he curled up in a U shape? Is he jammed in an accordion shape? No. He is usually stretched straight out, isn't he? Well then, why not introduce him to the fish that way?

Place your hook about two feet below your sinker. I use a size six or eight-fly hook with the eye turned up. Thread the worm from the head through the body until it covers the eye and extends up the lead, push the hook out of the worm about three-quarters of its length so that the hooks hang almost, but not quite, free. Yes, that's right. Not entirely covered. You will find you will get more fish on those short strikes. I've found over the years that the fish pay no attention to the hook, anyway, and that when the worm is stretched out straight so that he can wiggle, ol' finny face can't resist them.

If, when trolling, you keep getting strikes, but no fish, drop another hook about one inch below your baited hook. This usually smartens things up in a hurry because a fish strikes from the side and above the bait in a slashing motion, and when he is not really hungry, he strikes short. This lower trailing hook is the one that gets him.

Use the worm, then, for steelhead, trout, bass, grilse and coho behind a spoon or troll, but when fishing the streams or rivers, get it to the bottom where the fish are.

WHEN WE START considering the number of natural baits available to us, it's like trying to count the number of stones on a river bottom. Out of the hundreds, however, let's just deal with the ones most easily available. We have dealt with the worm because it is the most widely known and used. Well, let's take the shrimp, for instance. This salt water creature, so abundant on our coast, is one of the best and probably the least used bait of all. For steelhead or trout they are on a par with salmon eggs or paste. Shrimp can usually be purchased by the pound from the men who trap them, the Sooke area being the best I've found to get a supply. You can use this bait in its natural state—uncooked! Some fishermen use the whole shrimp, but I've found the tail portion is best. Use a long shank hook about size six. Remove the head of the shrimp and thread the hook downward through the body and out the tail exposing about half the shank and barb. Then fish it like any other bait.

If you feel really ambitious and do not mind a little work and effort, go dig yourself some ghost shrimp or prawns. Most of the mudflats around Sidney near Roberts Bay or on the big mudflat on your right as you approach the Tsawwassen ferry wharf hold plenty of these prawns. Select a low tide, then dig in the mud for them. They look very much like a fresh water cray-fish, which incidentally is another excellent but harder to come by bait. The only problem with these ghost shrimp, they soften very quickly. Therefore it is essential they be dug shortly before you go fishing, otherwise they spoil. It helps if you can keep them in salt water and sea weed until ready for use.

Salmon roe is probably used as extensively now, particularly for steelhead, as any other bait and can be purchased already cured in a number of places at about 30c a pound. For years it was illegal here on Vancouver Island, except on the Nanaimo River. Why the game officials ever permitted its use again is somewhat of a mystery to most of the fishing clan, unless is was due to the fact they knew it was being used and it was too difficult to combat it. It is legal, however, so if you wish, make the most of it. The eggs of the steelhead itself are, I find, the best by far over salmon eggs. Perhaps it's the color—the steelhead egg being a nice yellowish orange, the salmon egg being red. Neither of these eggs can be successfully frozen for later use; they become soft and difficult to hold on a hook. It is therefore necessary to cure them with a preservative. I use one-third table salt and two-thirds houbesold Borax. Place a liberal portion of this mixture in a paper bag. Drop one strip of egg in at a time and roll it around well so that the eggs are entirely covered. Take them out and place them on a piece of cardboard. Put them somewhere where it is reasonably warm for about three days. Now you can either slice it into bait size or leave in the whole and break off as much as you wish when fishing.

I take the cured eggs, put them in plastic bags and place them in the deep freeze. After they are cured the freezing process doesn't harm them and they do not harden up as much. Straight table salt may be used if you prefer without the Borax, but it hardens very quickly. If you do not have a deep freeze, place your cured eggs in a jar, drop in a lighted match and quickly tighten the lid. This will burn up the little oxygen in the container and help keep them longer. Store in a cool place.

ANOTHER GOOD USE of the salmon eggs is to make single cured eggs. Now this is a little more trouble, but for the effort put into it I'm sure you will reap good dividends. Try to obtain the largest eggs possible, preferably from a large spring salmon. Now while the little woman is out in the garden or away shopping, take one of her large mixing bowls. Place your eggs in the bowl and add hot, but not boiling water. With a fork, stir the eggs around in a lifting motion so that the eggs start separating from the sack. You may have to add more hot water, but after a few minutes the eggs will start to pull free. Pick out as much of the skin as possible. The more you get out the better. The eggs will have a tendency to whiten but no matter. When they are sufficiently clean pour them in a sieve and drain and rinse alternately until clean. When you are satisfied they are ready put them in a shallow pot. Cover with hot water and place over a low flame. Keep stirring while the water heats. It will take about 15 to 20 minutes but gradually the eggs will begin to cook. Do not let them boil. Keep picking an egg out and testing it until it feels fairly firm but springy to the touch. I keep a fish hook handy and keep testing the eggs by impaling it with the hook. When the eggs cease to emit oil and will stay firmly on the hook they are ready.

Again into the captain's cupboard, find her vegetable coloring, the kind she uses to tint icing with. Just use the orange and the red. By adding a few drops of each to the water you will soon get the proper tint you wish. Stir the eggs around until they have all become dyed, then remove and drain. Use small jars with screw tops. Scald them well in boiling water, fill with eggs, cap them up white hot and store them away for future use.

The next step is most important. Take the mixing bowl, fork and sieve and bury them.

To make salmon egg paste, the same procedure is followed except they are not cooked. After the same separating and cleaning process, put the eggs back in the mixing bowl. Now add regular table salt, not the rough coarse kind. Mix in a good liberal amount so that they are well covered. Here we go again. Get one of wife's silk stockings. Pour in the eggs and hang in a warm place for about three days. By feeling them you will find they become quite solid. Empty them into the mixing bowl again and with a large spoon or fork start squashing them, the more you break them up the better. I get in with my hands and knead them as you would bread dough. As you do this wou will note the gucky mess becomes quite clear, and is fairly sticky. If they have been cleaned thoroughly you will have a nice clear red paste that can be rolled between your fingers into a small ball and placed on a hook. If you haven't cleaned them properly it turns quite milky and doesn't look quite as natural. In either case you will wind up with a wife who thoroughly hates the sight and smell of you.

LET'S GO ON NOW to other baits available to you while you are out fishing.

In the spring of the year, if you keep your eyes open, nature opens her store box of reptiles and insect larvae and eggs for your taking. Those small, bright green frogs found in marshy areas or along river banks are excellent bait, but not the brown toads. I've yet to catch fish on them. If you are able to get a few frogs, render the "coup de grace" and with a long shank hook of fair size go up through the lower jaw, turn the hook, run it along the back and down again through the body just behinds its back legs.

Now these little fellows are soft and do not hang on too well, so be careful with your cast or they will shake off.

An old Indian trick is to place the frog bait on a fair-size piece of bark and let it float into the water in the current to where you want it. Then gently flip it off. If there's a fish about—hang on!

Frogs are particularly good for smallmouth bass and brown trout.

Nature, in its wondrous stages of reproduction, produces some startling and sometimes awesome looking bugs and crawling things. The beautiful dragon fly for instance in its earlier stages of life is like something out of a horror movie. If you turn over floating logs around lake shores along about mid-May or June you will see the fore-runner of the dragon fly as an ugly, green, large-headed water bug clinging to the underside. Its ugliness is probably its only protection against other underwater predators. The fish, however, gulp them down and hence we have another bait.

The caddis and may and stone fly all spend their pupal stage beneath the water and in their various stages of evolution provide food for the fish. Those tiny, black, branch-like pieces you see clinging to the rocks on the river bottoms, are the housing development of the caddis fly in its worm stage of life. Later as the water warms they emerge, float to the top, dry out and (if they are lucky) fly away. If you pick a few of these off the rocks and use a tiny hook, you have one of the trout's main spring foods.

THE EGGS of the large, black ants can be used on a very small No. 16 fly hook. With the aid of an axe and a certain amount of ambition, rotten stumps can be broken open and the white grubs you will find are one of the best stream baits you can use. Under the logs you will find centipedes, those very fast, many legged red critters, crickets under leaves and bits of bark, willow moths on the tree-lined river banks and hundreds of other natural fish foods. The whole trouble is that a goodly number of poor fishermen are just too lazy and not observant enough to realize what is at hand just for the taking.

Comes the hot, lazy days in summer and with them the grasshoppers. This aerial artist is one of the best fish-getters you can use. For the lake bass he is hard to beat and for river trout he is at times the only thing that will shake them out of their summer lethargy. Just try them sometime in the pools on the Cowichan River when the water is low. Impaled on a small fly hook and light lead and drifted without weight, mainly in the late evening hours, it will make you realize you have missed a lot of fun because you just assumed the fish wouldn't feed in warm weather.

So there you have it. And in this article I have only touched on a few of nature's tid-bits. Most of these baits require a certain amount of time and effort on your part. Most of the baits mentioned here you can't buy, you have to work for them, but your efforts will pay off handsomely. You will catch fish and that is the purpose for which we row the lake or tramp the streams.

Now I guess I'll give the kids a quarter to dig me some worms.

SPRING'S HERE

. . . Fool's Day Notwithstanding

By BERT BINNY

SUPPOSING you had been a citizen of London, England, in March of 1860, you just might have received a card bearing the following quite fascinating announcement:

> "TOWER OF LONDON"—Admit the Bearer and Friend to view the Annual Ceremony of Washing the White Lions on Sunday, April 1st, 1860. Admitted only at the White Gate. It is particularly requested that no gratuities be given to the Wardens or their Assistants."

Had you received such an invitation you would have been one of many and, had you accepted it, you would not have been alone.

On Sunday, April 1, 1860, carriages were rattling all over Tower Hill seeking the White Gate or the White Lions or the ceremonial ablutions. That none of these was ever found is no surprise because none of them, in fact, existed.

The secret of the whole affair was the date—April 1; then, as now "April Fool's Day" or, if you prefer "All Fools' Day." The grand ceremonial lion-washing was nothing more or less than an elaborate, large-scale hoax and it worked very well indeed.

FURTHER BACK STILL, on March 31 of 1713, we find Jonathan Swift—he of "Gulliver's Travels" fame—"contriving a lie for tomorrow." The "lie," incidentally, was about 50 per cent ingenious and 50 per cent gruesome since it stated that a recently executed criminal had unaccountably come to life again and was to be reapprehended at a certain time and place.

April Fool's Day was and, perhaps, still is quite a notable occasion in France where an April Fool is called a "poisson d'Avril."

Francis, Duke of Lorraine, and his wife escaped on April 1 from the city of Nantes where they were being held captive. Though disguised as peasants, they were recognized by someone who knew them but, when this informer breathlessly panted out the news to the guard, she was greeted with unanimous shouts—led by the sergeant on duty—of "April Fool!" By the time the guards discovered who, in actual fact, were the April Fools, it was too late. The duke and his duchess were long gone.

A French woman who was arrested for stealing a watch once protested that the whole business was an April Fool trick. Entering at least partially into the spirit of the affair, the magistrate popped the defendant into the cooler until the Following April Fool's Day.

THERE ARE SEVERAL THEORIES as to the origin of April Fool's Day. The fool is a "gowk" or "cuckoo" in Scotland and, as has already been noted, a "fish" in France.

Conceded about the least validity of all is the suggestion that sending people on fool's errands commemorates the sending of Christ from Annas to Caiaphas, from Caiaphas to Pilate, from Pilate to Herod and from Herod back to Pilate again.

On the other hand, it is virtually certain that the April Fools' idea traces back to the once universal festivities celebrating the spring equinox and, in this particular connection, it is an immemorial custom in India.

Yet another quite feasible explanation originates in France where until 1564, when Charles IX brought in the reformed calendar, April 1 was New Year's Day. Consequently, when the giving of New Year's gifts and felicitations and the paying of ceremonial New Year's calls was transferred to January 1, those who objected to the change became fair victims of jokesters who sent them mock presents and paid mock ceremonial calls on the old New Year's Day.

April Fooling does not seem to have taken hold in Great Britain until the beginning of the 18th century though the first day of April was, apparently, a day of general festivity from very ancient times.

Also it seems to me that there used to be a refinement on the whole custom in that fooling had to be accomplished by midday. However, I've never heard this peculiar arrangement mentioned in the past 35 years.

PERHAPS IT IS FITTING that the month of April should start off with a bit of extra-curricular fun.

It is a popular month, indeed, among, for instance, the writers. According to Bartlett's "Quotations," it leads in literary allusions by a comfortable margin: 29 to May's 23 with June and December occupying the other play-off spots with 14 apiece.

But a rather casual glance through the prodigious list of well-known popular songs reveals that "May" and "June" each figure in eight titles, "July" and "September" in three and "April" in just two.

And these last are "April in Paris" of 1932 and "April Showers," introduced by Al Jolson in "Bombo" in 1921 and borrowed from the poem, "April Rain," by Robert Loveman.

APRIL has had a checkered history as far as the calendar is concerned. In the Alban calendar it was the first month of the year with 36 days. Under Romulus it lost six days and dropped to second place. Numa lopped off another day and placed it fourth. Julius Caesar restored the thirtieth day without disturbing the status quo.

The name, "April," is connected with the Latin, "aperire," meaning "to open," thus indissolubly uniting April with the opening or spring of the year. A Roman goddess named "Aphrilis" is also mixed in somewhere along the line but she is of no very great consequence.

"The Twelve Moneths," a book published in 1661, describes April in idyllic terms worthy almost of a Shapespeare: and there are numerous saws and proverbs about it, too.

But it has had its dark days. The brief life span of the Titanic ran from April 1, 1912, when she completed her trials, to April 15, 1912, when, on her maiden voyage, she sank in the north Atlantic with over 1,500 of her passengers and crew.

The end of the world was confidently predicted for April of 1843 by a real giant among

A Letter to THE ISLANDER for the Late O. E. French

Castor Cure

DEAR SIR:

I have been reading Mr. O. E. French's story of the Beaver in The Islander and maybe you would be interested in my story of a prospector who worked the McConnell Creek and kept a family of beaver as a side line.

I was sent to Hazelton in 1910 to open a branch bank for the convenience of the contractors building the Pacific end of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Shortly after that I became acquainted with Pete Jensen, prospector, who brought in his gold to be sent to the assay office in Vancouver. Pete would start out on the spring crust with two toboggans and one set of dogs, relaying until he got to McConnell Creek. He would sluice the ground he had made ready the previous summer while the water was high and then prospect some more. He would stay in for the winter that year, set up some more ground to be sluiced the next spring and take some beaver out of the river for their furs. In the fall of the second year he would come in to Hazelton, stay in town that winter and repeat the trek out in the spring.

He was the only man in a large territory and saw no one else—not even Indians—and I was worried over his way of life.

"What if you broke a leg, Pete?"

"I won't do that."

"Do you have anything extra for Christmas?"

"Yes, I know where a bear is holed up, so I dig him out at Christmas."

"What if you take sick?"

"I kill the beaver and drink the oil out of their tail when I feel bad, drink it, and that fixes me all up."

I imagine this must be the castors of Mr. French's story. (Islander, March 7).

I am now 80 years of age, have lost a lot of my ability to type and think clearly but I thought it might interest you.

By the way—when the planes started flying into that country from Fort St. James, Pete discarded his dogs and went that way, so I never saw him again. I heard eventually that he died there.

Ladies of the Legion

Today the branch is more active than ever with a membership of almost 100. Applications keep coming in from prospective members who in affixing their signatures solemnly declare that "I am not a member of, or affiliated with any group, party, or sect which interests conflict with the avowed purposes of the Legion." These applications receive careful consideration, and after they are accepted, they become members in a formal initiation ceremony presided over by the zone commander, or the branch chairman, who explains the Legion's symbols such as the Union Jack, the Blood Red Poppy of Flanders, the Torch, and the Badge.

If the need should arise again for general mobilization, Canadian housewives and typists would be in queues along with their men. But in the interim these modern counterparts of Athene, Greek goddess of war, will continue to carry on the high endeavor of their wartime service towards building a lasting peace and a prosperous Canada.

ODDLY ENOUGH, another fascinating event relates to April 1. To this date belongs the earliest and still extant mention of hansom cabs in London, contained in a letter by one, "Gossip" Garrard, to the Lord-Deputy of Ireland, Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford.

The cabs, incidentally, to the number of four, were introduced by—of all people—a retired sea captain named Baily. This occurred in 1634. The Thames watermen who had a virtual monopoly on public transport were, naturally, strenuously opposed to the innovation. So, too, were London's shopkeepers who blanched at the ghastly vision of potential customers rattling by in cabs far too speedily to allow of their taking in the window displays. Neither the watermen nor the doughty merchants ever progressed very far with their complaints. By 1771 the legal limit on the number of hansom cabs plying for hire had risen to 1,000.

OH, YES! April is an excellent month. Most apposite of all those numerous quotations about her is, I rather think, that from "John Mistletoe" by Christopher Morley:

"April prepares her green traffic light and the world thinks 'Go'!"

MORE from MORAVIA

. . . bland breakfast fare

THE FETISH, by Alberto Moravia; Secker & Warburg; $5.25.

Signor Moravia is faultless to a fault — a criticism that is going to take some explaining.

Twenty years ago, I first read an Alberto Moravia short story. Since then I have been through much of his collections, Roman Tales and More Roman Tales. And I regret to say I can't remember one of those stories.

At the time I enjoyed them. I also enjoyed the 41 stories in his latest collection, The Fetish. But I'm not going to remember them.

Such is the reward of competence. Not one of these stories is incompetently constructed or written. No single character once says anything jarringly out of character. There isn't a trace of error in technique. There is even an evenness in length.

After reading half a dozen, let alone 41, stories like this, words crop up in one's mind—professionalism, formula-writing, and then, stubbornly bland.

And that, of course, is why I don't remember Signor Moravia's stories after the first, usual enjoyment. They are like breakfasts, which make very satisfactory daily meals, but you hardly distinguish between one unvarying egg and the other.

Moravia's stories shouldn't be bland because every one is a variation of that most exciting, most intresting of themes, the man-woman relationship.

Usually, there is a catalyst to start the relationship bubbling in its clear-glassed confinement. In Appointment at the Beach (in this book) it is a corpse, in Jealousy Plays Trucks it is a dream, in The Escape it is a figure on the horizon.

These all make interesting introductions, but too soon the little experiment is over—poof! There are never any big bangs, no pyrotechnics. Only that little poof that, you feel, has left the original elements largely undisturbed or only produced a bland-new inconsequential compound.

Perhaps I should point out, in fairness to Alberto Moravia, that immediately before picking up this book, I was re-reading some Hemmingway short stories, including The Killers and The Snows of Kilimanjaro. I knew great parts of these stories, practically word for word; the endings, probably the first time round, were foreseen; the style is spare to the point of asceticism. You can't read these without being concerned.—PERCY ROWE.

Seven-Year Task

Pedretti Plumbs Da Vinci Depths

By IRVING STONE, author of
THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY, LUST FOR LIFE and other biographical novels.

There have been three or four periods in history when man's mind has flowered in such creative genius that the world and civilization were changed.

The first was the glorious period in Greek history, starting with Solon, 638 BC, coming down through Aeschylus, Euripides, Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, 384 BC. During this period much that is good and constructive in the western world was born.

The first rebirth or renaissance of this flowering of man's genius took place in Italy. It began with Nicolla Pisano in Pisa (born circa 1225) and Giotto (circa 1267) coming down through the most formidable list of great artists the world has ever known, working in one era of time. Among them would be Fra Angelico, Ghiberti, Brunelleschi, Botticelli, Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci.

An old Italian poem attempts to explain this fabulous renaissance:

> Italy is the garden of Europe;
> Tuscany is the garden of Italy;
> Florence is the flower of Tuscany.

If Florence is the flower of Tuscany, and truly she is! then the two tallest and most magnificent plants in that garden are assuredly Michelangelo, Buonarotti and Leonardo da Vinci.

There are some who think that Leonardo da Vinci represents the noblest example of the universal man, of a single human brain and spirit which could know everything and accomplish everything.

HERO OF SCHOLARS

Leonardo da Vinci has always excited the interests of scholars. Now he is the hero of still another book, Leonardo da Vinci on Painting, by Carlo Predetti, (University of California Press: $12, illustrated). However, this is not a biography. It is an attempt to set the record straight, once and for all, about a body of Leonardo's work which Prof. Pedretti claims has been lost.

In actuality the work has not been lost, since as Dr. Elmer Belt, the Vinciana expert admits, at least 90 per cent of the observations on art have been available to the English-speaking world in The Notebooks of Leonardo da Vinci, edited by Edward MacCurdy, albeit in a scrambled fashion.

Yet Pedretti has done us an invaluable service by rediscovering and then placing the folios on hydraulics in their proper place. He also has established a logical and convincing order in the pattern of the art observations.

First let us tell the story of the "lost" notebook as Pedretti sets it forth with considerable clarity in his book.

Leonardo da Vinci had the fartherest-ranging mind since that of Aristotle. Parenthetically, he read Aristotle and was greatly indebted to the Greek philosopher for his scientific approach to the world about him. Everything he saw interested him and stimulated him to trenchant thinking in areas where previously there had been little set down in words.

To give just a few examples among hundreds to be found in the notebooks, he wrote exploratively on anatomy, hydraulics, mathematics, the nature of light, reflection, gravity, the sky and the basic principles of flight. He even tried out, secretly, a pair of wings from a hill in Fiesole, emerging with only an injured leg!

Basically, however, Leonardo wrote about painting and sculpture, and his Treatise on Painting has been used with great value by artists ever since. He was not really a great sculptor. His one major opus, an equestrian monument for the Sforzas in Milan, was too large to be cast in bronze.

His strictures on sculpture infuriated his neighbor Michelangelo. However, Leonardo was a penetrating and brilliant student of the universe and he passed on knowledge in every form to the generations that followed him.

Herein lies Pedretti's most significant contribution in Leonardo da Vinci on Painting: A Lost Book. Leonard was a world unto himself.

He never did anything the way any other man did. He wrote left-handed, starting at the back of his notebooks and set down every word backward in what has come to be known as mirror writing. His purpose seems to have been to keep his thoughts, often revolutionary in nature, private from inquisitive eyes.

The great tragedy of Leonardo's life is that he left almost nothing in a completed stage. He was always more interested in the experiment and in the thought process than the finished product. The total body of his art work remaining is painfully small, considering the fact that he worked as an artist for some 40 years. There are only a few canvases, in addition to "The Last Judgment" in Milan; and some of the canvases, such as the one in the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, are also unfinished.

NOTES UNORGANIZED

As Pedretti makes abundantly clear, the notebooks were not left unfinished, they were simply left unorganized. Leonardo had a quite scientific filing and cross-check system. He always intended to collate his materials and organize them into specific and recognizable categories. This he never got around to.

The end of his life was troubled. He left Rome because of lack of patronage and settled in France for three years under the protection of Francis I, but he does not seem to have accomplished very much during this stay.

What is Pedretti's contribution in his new book?

It is an urgent one, from the scholar's point of view. Leonardo's materials were organized and partly classified after his death by his long-time friend and confidante, Francesco Melzi, who first compiled the "Treatise on Painting."

"Much of the material happily ended in the Vatican under the name of the Codex Urbinas. Other notebooks were deposited in Milan under the name of Codex Atlanticus.

HUMANIZED HISTORY

THE FATHERS OF THE NATION

The Road to Confederation* exemplifies a manner in which one could wish more of history were written. Its scholarly author, Professor Donald Creighton of the University of Toronto, has not scrupled about employing the imaginative arts of the novelist to recreate, through colorful description and vivid characterization, the century-old atmosphere of the period under review.

The Macdonald, Brown, Cartier, Tilley and Tupper of these pages are not the stodgy, bearded and frock-coated "grandfathers" of Confederation we imagine as we see them in that familiar stiltedly posed group photograph. As described by Creighton, the founders of this nation were warm-blooded human beings, eating, drinking and dancing away the nights, indulging in great quarrels and petty jealousies, stooping to shameless political chicanery — yet inspired by sufficient of common patriotic purpose to combine their talents for the great achievement which was theirs.

A few sentences narrating the departure on August 29, 1864, of the Canadian delegation from Quebec for Charlottetown are typical of the author's style:

"The Queen Victoria was hardly a luxury steamer. The cabins were rather small and cramped, the beds hard, and the vibration of the screws all too noticeable. But to the tired Canadian ministers, who had done their work and made all their preparation, the prospect of a completely relaxed and leisurely voyage down the St. Lawrence looked extremely attractive. The day had been hot, but there was a broad awning stretched above the sunny deck under which they could loaf in comfort. A little library of books had been provided. There were chessboards and backgammon, a large and varied supply of food and drink and a cook who knew how to make the best use of his materials. That evening as the sun went down behind them . . . a group of mid-Victorian colonial politicians, in tile hats and frock coats, were setting out in a small government steamer on as uncertain and possibly as decisive an enterprise as ever the white coated and red coated soldiers of the past had sailed to undertake."

THE ROAD TO CONFEDERATION, by Donald Creighton, MacMillan of Canada; $7.50.

A 'teen-ager, bored stiff with dates and constitutional complexities, might read that with enjoyment.

Lest the impression be conveyed that this romantic atmosphere is a fictional creation it is well to state that the author has provided, in his 444 pages, no fewer than 1,170 references to the sources of his facts. While many of these are official despatches and records, they include also a generous profusion of intimate personal letters between principal figures in the drama and members of their families. The diary of George Coles' invalid daughter sheds invaluable illumination on the atmosphere at Quebec during the second conference.

Without questioning Dr. Creighton's strict historical accuracy, a critical reader may, nevertheless, close this book with the vaguely uneasy feeling that he has been exposed to something akin to Tractarian propaganda. If such a suspicion should be justified it could probably be traced to unbalanced emphasis, giving the reader a distorted perspective, rather than to a misstatement of fact.

In this 1965 disturbed phase of Canadian evolution a strong case could be made out politically for staging a melodrama in which the heroes Brown and Macdonald rescue the maiden, Confederation, and place her in control of her legitimate British North American estate despite the villainous machinations of a sinister Joseph Howe and the obstructiveness of self-centred little Islanders. But would that be history?

Was the Tribune of Nova Scotia the vain, bitter, envious misanthrope that appears in these pages. Was Cartier little more than a playboy, content, so long as the peril of Yankee republicanism was removed, to waive or ignore other precious interests of his French and Catholic compatriots? Were Langevin and Tache the mere ciphers that Creighton bluntly calls them?

Then again one can not help wondering if the influence of George Brown was either as benign or as dominantly effective as here implied. Brown was a writer by profession and by habit. Fortunately for posterity much of his personal correspondence, even with his wife, as well as the files of the Globe, have been preserved for examination by historians. Creighton appears to have read every word of it and in not too critical adulation to have uncovered a more pleasing personality than most Canadians had hitherto suspected.

In this conclusion he may be justified. But he fails to carry conviction that the vindictive, vitriolic editor of what used to be called in rural Ontario the "Scotchman's Bible" was a principal factor in persuading Lower Canada to enter the pact. Indeed the author concedes that Brown's consuming passion was attainment of "rep by pop"—a fine democratic principle in the days of electoral reform. But the arguments advanced by Brown had much more to do with acquiring and maintaining supremacy of the newly-established English-speaking majority now centred in Canada West, than they had with abstract reform.

It could hardly have been this "clear Grit" ultra-Protestant line that won the trust and confidence of Cartier and his Quebec colleagues. One looks for a more tolerant, liberal spirit revealing capacity to understand differing philosophies as having piloted the delicate negotiations for Confederation into harbor. One finds him, of course, in John A. Macdonald.

These are speculations for weighty consideration by persons more deeply versed than this reviewer in the minutiae of Canadian history. The thought occurs, however, that the difficulty here encountered is an inherent defect of the book's great virtue—its emphasis on the human and romantic aspects of our nation birth.

PEDRETTI PLUMBS DA VINCI DEPTHS

Many of the notebooks were given away as gifts by their succeeding owners. Consequently only six of the 18 manuscripts listed by Melzi are still in existence.

Sir Kenneth Clark says in his brief introduction to Pedretti's book, "It would not be extravagant to claim that Leonardo da Vinci's 'Treatise on Painting' is the most precious document in the whole history of art. To find out even a little more about this extraordinary work would be a valuable contribution to knowledge. Carlo Pedretti, in the work which follows, has found out a great deal."

Are the 131 notes in Leonardo's "Treatise on Painting," including the 30 folios on hydraulics which Pedretti found misplaced in the Codex Leicester in England, now arranged in precisely the order which Leonardo himself would have placed them? Possibly so. Pedretti has spent seven years in brilliant literary detective work, using every method known to scholars and science, and a few probably invented by himself.

Why is this logical and organic arrangement of material so urgent that it would warrant a man spending seven years of his life in the effort? Probably because the world would very much like to know step by step procedures of Leonardo's thinking, how he arrived at a point of view, the growth of ideas within his own mind from the time he started work as a youth, progressed to the creations of middle age and then at the end of his life attempted to set down his thinking in a definitive form.

Pedretti himself has not attempted to extract Leonardo's sequence and evolvement of thought. That is a task for another scholar, someone who will probably spend another seven years working in the field.

The "Treatise on Painting" is printed with Leonardo's Italian, amazingly modern in tone, set immediately opposite an excellent English translation by Florence Longman.

The book is imperative to all artists, art students and art historians. Leonardo was a genius of such staggering proportions that nature seemed to open her secrets to him as though to its first and most ardent lover. It may, however, be somewhat too technical a volume for the general reader.

In Old Victoria of Hectic Politics

THEY BURNED POOR HIGGINS . . . in effigy

By JAMES K. NESBITT

It was the spring of 1877 in Victoria, and there were all sorts of goings-on, so that everyone was happy and interested. I do not know of what it's a sign, but I can read the papers of those years and become completely fascinated, and some of that fascination I hope to hand on to you.

I enjoyed reading about the Bachelors' Ball, which, according to The Colonist, "was an assemblage of beauty, rank and wealth of Victoria."

The paper went on in a sort of poetic way to describe the festivities: "There were, at the least calculation, 180 ladies and gentlemen. The navy and army were well represented . . . the ministers of the government and members of the legislative assembly mustered pretty strong. Knighthood was represented by a gentleman who has identified himself with the peace, order and prosperity of this province for years."

(This must have been Chief Justice Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, one of the most eligible bachelors of all time in Victoria. But why the mystery? Why was he not identified by name? Some little joke, one must suppose.)

The Colonist reporter, probably very young, gave romantic details of the Bachelors' Ball: "Law had its justices, and many other members of the time-honored profession. Beauty was there in all its loveliness.

"Verses long forgotten came to mind:
Her lovely dark eyes flashing bright
Lighten my soul with the grand light
That makes earth Heaven—Oh! what delight
Those dark eyes made for me."

And then:

"Her soul as pure as the morning dew
Looking out of those eyes so sweet and blue
As an angel looks from Heaven."

The report ended this way: "The efforts of the committee to give pleasure to their guests was never before better repaid than by the joyous, happy maidens at the Bachelors' Ball."

One of the big events of that spring of 88 years ago was the visit here of a famed violinist, Madame Camilla Urso. We read in The Colonist it was "a musical triumph," and the minute Madame Urso appeared before the footlights there was an outburst of "long-continued applause."

Madame Urso, as well as being a good violinist, was a fashion plate, and this fact was much enjoyed in Victoria, so far removed from the salons of London and Paris and New York and San Francisco. The Colonist noted: "The dresses of this lady are of the richest and most costly description, having been imported from Paris. She wore last evening a pearl silk dress, with a crimson velvet train, the whole being richly embroidered and laced. In the first part Mme. Urso played a violin solo 'Adagio and Polonaise,' and was recalled twice. For the encore she played 'The Polish Legend' with muted strings.

"In the second part she played 'The Witches' Dance,' and was three times recalled, a compliment never before extended in this city."

When Madame Urso was in Seattle, returning to San Francisco, she poked a little fun at our legislators. She was interviewed by a reporter of The Seattle Dispatch, and what he wrote was reprinted in The Victoria Standard, to the fury of some of our MLAs.

BACHELOR BEGBIE
. . . he represented knighthood, but was not identified.

Here it is (from The Seattle Dispatch): "We asked Madame Camilla Urso what kind of houses she had during her violin performances at Victoria.

" 'Oh, veree good,' replied the little lady, 'only for ze Parliamong zey bettair.'

"On our expressing our ignorance of how the Legislature could conflict with musical entertainments, the Madame replied, 'Oh, we have nothing comique about our performances, but at ze Parliamong zey 'av everyzing ridiculeuse,'' and the industrious little woman sighed to think what hard work it was to play in opposition to the 'assembled wisdom' of the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia, our close and good friend."

Politics was more bitter in those days than now. The newspapers were merciless in dealing with their political enemies.

The Standard couldn't abide D. W. Higgins, editor of The Colonist. The Standard attempted to ruffle Higgins' feathers this way: "THE CHAMPION LIAR—A few of Mr. D. W. Higgins' friends intend raising a subscription for the purpose of paying that notorious fellow's passage as far as New York, where he will be exhibited at Barnum's Museum, as the champion liar of America."

The Standard was ruthless in its tirade against Higgins: "Last night a procession was formed outside the Hook and Ladder House, Government Street, and headed by Haynes' Band proceeded to the residence of Mr. G. A. Walkem, Pandora Ave., for the purpose of welcoming that gentleman on his return after an absence of some months in California.

"Over 2,000 persons joined in the procession, which was headed by the band and lighted on its way by innumerable torches. On arriving in front of Mr. Walkem's house three hearty cheers were given for that gentleman.

"After the band had played several suitable airs, the procession reformed and proceeded to Government Street, by way of Johnson, halting opposite The Colonist office, where a life-like effigy of the proprietor of that journal, hung to a gallow, was burned amidst the execrations of the spectators.

"The effigy was a very natural representation of that notorious fellow, dressed in his usual street clothes, black hat, gloves and umbrella.

"The hands were spread out in Higgins' most emphatic manner, just below the roudded stomach which has been so well fed the last two years with Mackenzie's pap." (This was a dig that Higgins was in the pay of the federal government, to the detriment of British Columbia.)

. . . she showed considerable ability.

"Whoever the artist was he certainly deserves credit for his faithful picture of Higgins.

"During the execution, the lights in The Colonist office burned glim, and when the burnt remains of the traitor fell to the ground, the band played 'The Rogue's March,' winding up with the 'Dead March.' "

The Standard office was then serenaded, after which the procession reformed and proceeded to the residences of Hon. Mr. (Robert) Beaven, Hon. Dr. (John) Ash and Hon. T. B. Humphreys, each of whom made suitable addresses."

The Colonist reported the speeches, but completely ignored the burning in effigy of D. W. Higgins, naturally.

I found another newspaper note showing that legislators then were no more short-winded than they are today:

"THE HOUSE—Nearly the whole of the afternoon was consumed in discussing the right of the Public Accounts Committee to demand information from the government that had not first been laid before the House.

"The debate was long and desultory. Mr. Speaker James Trimble, after giving an opinion that the question was irregular, allowed the widest latitude for debate, which was seized by the opposition—most of whom spoke six times, and one 11 times.

"The refusal of the government was at last sustained by the casting vote of the Speaker . . . and then Mr. Walkem proceeded to speak to the galleries till the hour of six arrived."

Well, I suppose one can say it was ever thus with our elected representatives.

There is just one more item I liked in that spring of 18877: "Theatricals and ball at Government House — The attendance numbered some 300 ladies and gentlemen. The piece selected for the private theatricals was 'Blow for Blow' by Henry J. Byron.

"The ballroom was divided off and a stage erected at the west end making a perfect little bijou of a theatre. The scenery was very attractive . . . .the dresses were very handsome, especially those worn by Miss Richards and Miss Douglas. Miss Susan Crease, and Messrs. D. R. Harris, C. R. Brodie and H. Harvey filled the parts assigned to them with considerable ability.

"After the play an excellent supper was provided, and the seats having been removed, dancing was commenced and lasted until daylight . . . All present expressed unbounded pleasure with the fete, and the kind hospitality of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Albert Norton Richards.

DAVID W. HIGGINS
. . . he was burned in effigy.
